Man, Strange Being.
Comfort in Figures.
The Dead Racketeers.
The Prince and Gertrude.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

"KNOW then thyself, presume not God to scan:
The proper study of mankind is man."

Pope wrote that, as you well remember, and Yale believes it, and will establish a special department for the study of mankind and human relations. Mr. Rockefeller has contributed $4,500,000 for the purpose, in addition to some $3,000,000 previously given.

HOW would you go about studying mankind, so interesting and infinitely various?

Shakespeare knew him well, if you will excuse another trite quotation.

"But man, proud man,
Drest in a little brief authority,
Most ignorant of what he's most assured,
His glassy essence, like an angry ape,
Plays such fantastic tricks before high Heaven
As makes the angels weep."

Some men think only of dollars and don't know what to do when they get them. Others working on scientific questions often miss the beauty of this earthly residence.

Huxley said "the difference between a highly developed white man and an African bushman is greater than the difference between that African and a blade of grass."

How can you arrive at conclusions by studying such a creature as man?

HIGH finance, worrying itself sick about four billions of call loans, should comfort itself with figures.

There are thirty and a half billions of dollars in national banks, sixteen billions in New York State alone. Many more billions are in savings banks, and workers of this country, leaving out speculators and big people, earn sixty billions every year, live on forty-five billions and have fifteen billions left over.

That ought to enable the people to borrow four or five billions for investment in stocks without causing high finance to lie down and die of grief.

CHICAGO'S assistant prohibition administrator, Maj. Silloway, explains the wholesale killing of seven racketeers thus:

The seven "racketeers" lined up with their faces to the wall, and shot dead with a machine gun, were killed not by imitation policemen, but BY REAL POLICEMEN.

THE policemen, according to the enforcement officer, had been collecting blackmail from the bootleggers and had "double-crossed" them, giving information to "hi-jackers" as to the bootlegging operations.

The hi-jackers held up the bootleggers, took away their money and goods. The bootleggers, "double-crossed," refused to pay blackmail.

THEREUPON, the genuine, not imitation, policemen, lined them up, faces to the wall, took away their guns and shot the seven of them dead. Maj. Silloway paints a pretty picture of civilization under prohibition.

A DAMSEL notices that "all the interesting people are engaged or married, except the Prince of Wales and Gertrude Ederle, who swam the channel."

She says: "How lovely it would be if they could marry."

Lovely indeed, especially for the British royal family. Such a combination would give that family energy enough to run for several generations more, and might produce another Henry the Eighth, or Richard the Lion Hearted.

HEREAFTER, probably cables and telegrams sent from Rome to outside countries will be dated "Vatican City," the word "Rome" not often appearing.

More than three-quarters of the news of Italy comes from Rome and has to do with the Catholic Church. News dispatches "dated Vatican City" will no longer remind the world of the Eternal City.

Mussolini, who understands the value of advertising, will think that over.

AT LIMA, O., Fred Conrad, 27, is starving himself "to drive the devil from his father, George Conrad."

The young man, with religious delusions, has eaten nothing for 23 days. Doctors say he cannot live more than another week if his fast continues.

THE unhappy father stands at the son's bedside, begging him to eat, but in vain.

Once such men as this unfortunate, self-starving creature, were praised as religious martyrs and heroes. Men know better now. They do not believe that it pleases God or frightens the devil to have weak human beings torture themselves.

GARDNER TO DIRECT INQUEST

District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner, incensed by the alleged slaying of John Borkoski, announced today that he will direct personally the inquest into the miner's death Tuesday, when a coroner's jury will decide if three coal and iron police of the Pittsburgh Coal Company shall be held for murder.

A recital of almost unbelievable savagery, told by witnesses to the brutal slaying of John Borkoski allegedly by coal and iron police, is being transcribed today by M. A. Musmanno, Stowe Township attorney and member of the State House of Representatives.

EXPECT QUICK ACTION

Musmanno is confident that when the report is submitted the Legislature will be prompt in passing his bill to abolish coal and iron police.

The facts in the killing were gathered personally by Musmanno yesterday in a tour of the country around Santiago and Imperial, where the crime was committed.

Meanwhile aides of the coroner and district attorney today will sift the facts gathered yesterday by the coroner's office in a field investigation of the case in the hope of so correlating the evidence that the three coal and iron police charged with the slaying will be sent to the electric chair, they declared.

CONSTABLE TALKS

The county detectives now have before them a detailed story from Constable Ross Schaffer, of Glenfield, who said he went to sleep in the coal company barracks while

Crashed Army Fliers Cheat Death

SELFRIDEGE FIELD, Mt. Clemens, Mich., Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Flying in "element formation" with 16 other pursuit planes, Lieut. W. L. Morgan, 22, and Lieut. Robert S. Scheenlein, came together in mid-air yesterday but escaped death by skillful handling of plane and parachute.

Morgan jumped about 5,000 feet and landed safely, while Scheenlein, the tail section of his plane damaged, righted it and brought it safely to the ground.

'FIREBUG' SETS BLAZES NEAR KDKA PLANT

Three incendiary fires on the property of James I. De Laney, Greensburg pike, Wilkins township, are being investigated today by county detectives. A jug that had contained kerosene was found following a fire last night which destroyed a chicken coop. The property adjoins the transmitting station of KDKA.

An unoccupied bungalow near the chicken coop was badly damaged. Both structures are near the three-story frame house occupied by the De Laneys. This house is known as the old Parchment homestead and is said to be more than 100 years old. The fire was discovered by neighbors, who called Forest Hills and Franklin Township firemen.

Monday night an attempt was made to destroy the bungalow. The fire was extinguished after doing about $600 damage. At the time, Mrs. De Laney and Miss Harriett McElwain were alone in the old homestead. County Detectives John T. Burke and Albert Shedlock are working on the case.

GANG WAR PUTS LID ON VICE

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—Two major developments today featured Chicago's reaction to the shocking killing of seven gangsters in their North Side rendezvous on Thursday morning.

The first was a drastic order to the police department from State's Attorney John A. Swanson, addressed to a conference of commissioners and captains, to "clean up Chicago or suffer indictment by the grand jury."

The second was a further development of the theory that members of the notorious Purple gang of Detroit were responsible for the assassination of the Moran gang. This, despite the fact that George "Bugs" Moran, leader of the ill-fated band, blames the faction headed by "Scarface" Al Capone, for the wholesale murder orgy.

MORAN STILL HIDING

Moran, who probably escaped the slaughter by being ill with influenza, is still in hiding, but sent his version of the killings to a local newspaper.

State's Attorney Swanson's order to police commissioners and captains, was, in effect, this:

"Enforce prohibition!"

Specifically, he said:

"Close and keep closed all gambling houses, houses of vice, soft drink parlors, speakeasies, beer flats, moonshine joints and all places where alcohol is handled."

INDICTMENTS THREATENED

"HILL" WAR FLARES ANEW

Magistrate A. D. Brandon, Police Inspector James N. Hoey, City Detectives Patrick Tulley and William Harris and Patrolman Harvey Lent were arrested today on warrants sworn out by Harry Fink, private detective operating out of Alderman John J. Verona's office, who charges all with conspiracy to indict.

The warrants were served at Central Police Station.

Hoey struck back in this latest conflict between the city police and the forces of the Hill district. After he was served with the warrant in Central Police Station by Constable Mario Cristofaro, a Verona aid, he had Cristofaro arrested, alleging that Cristofaro drew a revolver at the time he was serving the warrant and was disarmed only by the efforts of Detectives Tulley and Harris.

The five defendants apparently had been warned that the warrants were out. They had signed bail bonds ready for the constables—$5,000 each for Brandon and Hoey, and $1,000 for the police. Hoey's bond was signed by John A. Freyvogel.

The charges grew out of the arrest of Fink after a girl had testified before Brandon in Morals Court that Fink paid a $25 fine she had been penalized.

All but Hoey were served by Constable Lovuola, of Verona's office, who accepted the bonds. Hoey reported that Cristofaro had flashed his revolver and then refused to accept the bond.

ALMA RUBENS

Miss Rubens, film star whose life today hangs in the balance as she fights against the "dope" habit which wrecked her career.

HER PLIGHT SHOWS U.S. EASY WITH DEALERS

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 16.—Alma Rubens, beautiful film actress, only a few months ago at the height of a brilliant and promising career, is in a Los Angeles hospital making a last, desperate fight to free herself from the living death of narcotic addiction, while—

Dr. J. Jesse Citron, young fashionable physician of Hollywood and Beverly Hills, is under investigation by state and Federal officials on allegations of having sold the film star more than $1,300 worth of morphine in five weeks, and—

In spite of the fact that the pitiful details of Miss Rubens' case are known to the narcotic officers here and in San Francisco, negotiations are under way to settle the case against Dr. Citron for a cash payment of $2,500.

Cash for Souls

The amazing facts of the Rubens tragedy were uncovered by the Los Angeles Examiner in a narcotic investigation that seems to reveal that all over the United States the ponderous machinery of the governmental bureaus—to which the thoughtful men and women of the country are looking for help to suppress the dope traffic—is grinding out cash for broken lives and tortured souls.

Members of the young woman's family and loyal friends, crushed into despair by her sufferings and realization that Miss Rubens' very life hangs in the balance, have made known some of the sad details in the hope that justice and much needed reform may be achieved.

Dr. Citron, personally and through his attorney, last night entered a vigorous denial that he had violated the law or had given or made it possible for Miss Rubens to obtain narcotics in violation of the law. He said he was

BOMB DAMAGES CHURCH, SHOPS

A time bomb set off early today wrecked the shoe repair shop of Phillip Caleo, 25, 1208 Wylie avenue, and damaged two adjoining buildings, one the Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church.

The bombing followed the receipt by Caleo of Blackhand threats.

The explosion shook a score of homes in the district and brought hundreds rushing to the scene.

Windows in the church were broken, and Oscar World, Negro janitor, and his wife, living in a residence at the rear of the church, narrowly escaped injury.

Caleo, who resides at 1604 Cliff street, told the officers that he had received the Blackhand threats about a year ago when he was about to close a deal for another shoe shop in Fifth avenue. The note warned him that his place would be blown up if he did not drop the deal and leave the city at once.

Caleo dropped the negotiations he said. He received no other warnings before the bombing of his shop today.

The interior of Caleo's shop was wrecked by the explosion and the walls of the paint shop of M. Shepse at 1210 Wylie avenue were damaged.

AMNESIA VICTIM MAY BE WIFE OF PHYSICIAN HERE

Dr. C. H. Reber, Churchill road, Wilkins Township, today expressed the belief that the mystery amnesia victim who for a week has puzzled police and hospital authorities of Cleveland is his wife, Mrs. Leah Reber.

Mrs. Reber is aged 54, and the woman in the Cleveland hospital is described as being about 35. Descriptions of both women tally in other respects.

Mrs. Reber disappeared from her home last Saturday. Her husband believes she took a train from East Pittsburgh to Pittsburgh at that time. The Missing Persons Bureau wired Cleveland for a more detailed description of the "sad sweet-faced" woman in Charity Hospital.

The amnesia victim was found wandering about in Public Square, Cleveland, dazed and confused. Police found her and took her to the hospital. It was then discovered that she had registered at the Cleveland Hotel under the name of Mrs. Ann Williams, of Pittsburgh. Nothing was found in her baggage to indicate her identity. Physicians at the hospital said she was suffering from complete loss of memory.

The description furnished by the Cleveland authorities says the woman is attractive. She has long, dark hair, fair complexion and dark eyes. She weighs about 125 pounds. Her clothing is of good quality.

TWO BROTHERS BELIEVED DYING IN COASTING ACCIDENT

SCHOOL HEAD LAUDS FLAG CONTEST

School children throughout the United States are urged by William John Cooper, recently appointed United States Commissioner of Education, to participate in the great patriot flag contest of the United State Flag Association, which is being sponsored by the Hearst newspapers. Mr. Cooper was appointed to his new post by President Coolidge.

In an interview which he gave in Sacramento, Cal., just before he left for Washington, Commissioner Cooper declared:

"I hope that many thousands of school children of the 48 states and the territories will enter this contest."

Importance of the flag contest to the youth of America was emphasized by Commissioner Cooper in the following statement:

"FOUR BETTER CITIZENS"

"The average human mind has difficulty with abstract ideas. Accordingly, monarchies, headed by able royal families, have enjoyed an advantage not suspected by most people, in that the ruler has been the personal embodiment of the national ideals. In America we have attempted to substitute for the person of the monarch the flag as the concrete symbol of the abstract principles of democracy.

"Consequently, this contest, designed to arouse the interest of school children in the United States flag, cannot help making for better citizenship. For behind the flag will be found the lofty ideals and traditions of the republic.

"I hope that many thousands of school children of the 48 states and the territories will enter this contest."

The contest consists of answering 75 questions on the American flag and what it stands for and in writing a short essay that can be recited within five minutes, on "Old Glory's Greatest Glory."

RULES OF CONTEST

The condensed rules and regulations governing the contest are repeated herewith for the benefit of those who have not already seen them, and a complete set of these

Today's Flagism

On February 16, 1862, American forces captured Fort Donelson, Tenn., at which time General U. S. Grant won his nickname, "Unconditional Surrender Grant." Just as during the days of the Civil War, the American Flag has since demonstrated the fact that it represents an irresistible force for the advancement of freedom, progress and prosperity which no human agency has as yet been able to stay in the march of the years.

KILLINGS CLOSE CHICAGO

Civic leaders, thoroughly aroused by the long reign of gangland and its unspeakable horrors, are behind the state's attorney and his latest edict. Through the various civic organizations, these leaders have demanded that local authorities "clean up Chicago or admit failure and step out."

In the latter case, it was stated, the Federal government will be asked to take hand.

State's Attorney Swanson, realizing that the supreme test of his career is at hand, summoned to his office Commissioner of Police William Russell, the seven deputy commissioners and every captain on the force.

SWANSON EMPHATIC

With his fist crashing on the table as punctuation for his remarks, Swanson told the officers that their departments were to blame for the "massacre that has shocked the entire civilized world."

He told them these wholesale murders, like the long list of retail murders which preceded them, were committed for just one reason. That reason, he said, was the easy money which the police and the sheriff's office have permitted the gangsters to collect.

He gave both departments the severest lashing ever administered to them. In conclusion, he said:

"It is easier to get a jury to put a guilty policeman into prison than to put a guilty gangster there. If you doubt it, you can easily settle your doubts. That's all. You may go."

CITY CLOSED "TIGHT"

Evidence that the officers took the order to heart was abundant today. Chicago, for the first time in many moons, is strictly a "closed town." All known speakeasies and vice dens are locked up and even the die-hard gambling houses that boasted immunity from police interference are darkened today.

Meanwhile the investigation into Chicago's "worst crime" continued under three separate departments—the coroner's office, the state's attorney's office and the police department.

That the seven men were shot to death by Detroit gangsters, in revenge for the hijacking of their liquor, still was the favored theory today.

SOLUTION THOUGHT NEAR

Photographs of 16 members of the Detroit gang were obtained by Police Commissioner Russell late yesterday. Three of these men have already been identified as "spies" who for weeks occupied rooms at 2119 and 2135 North Clark street, with windows from which they could observe every person who entered the fatal garage where the seven gangsters were mowed down with machine-gun fire.

The solution of the mystery, if not the arrest of the murderers, is now believed by Commissioner Russell to be near at hand.

MAJ. F. D. SILLOWAY

Silloway, deputy prohibition director, Chicago, whose theory of the wholesale murder of seven members of one gang, ranged against a wall, was that Chicago police committed the crime in retaliation for the gangsters' refusal to pay protection money after the police had hijacked liquor shipment.

HOW UNARMED MEN, FACED TO WALL, WERE SLAUGHTERED

Chicago police for the specially called coroner's jury re-enacting at the scene how the seven gangsters, unarmed, were herded faces to the wall in this garage and coldly shot down by machine guns, shot guns and revolvers in the hands of five of another gang.

SEES ABOLITION OF COAL POLICE

Borkoski was being beaten. He voluntarily offered himself as a commonwealth witness yesterday to District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner, who questioned him in regard to his part in the case. Schaffer is alleged to have concerned himself with the arrest of John Higgins, friend of Borkoski, who witnessed the beating of Borkoski. The Borkoski beating did not concern him, he contended.

MOVE TO OUST CONSTABLE

Residents of Glenfield, however, have expressed a concern in the case by starting a move through their burgess, George W. Sebolt, to oust Schaffer.

The three men, Lieut. W. J. Lyster, and Privates H. P. Watts and Frank Slapakis, are being held in the county jail on a charge of murder pending the coroner's inquest Tuesday.

The first witness to be interviewed by Musmanno yesterday was Dr. J. M. Patterson, of Imperial, physician for the Pittsburgh Coal Company, who attended Borkoski at the police barracks early last Sunday when he was being beaten to death.

Asked if he had witnessed any beating or brutality, Dr. Patterson reluctantly declared that Lieut. Lyster beat Borkoski with a long blaack weapon, which appeared to be a leather strap, doubled. He also said he saw Lyster kick Borkoski in the ribs—"although you don't need to use this in your records, it was a violent kick," the doctor added. As for a poker being used, he said he did not see that.

TELLS OF WARNING

The doctor declared that at one stage of the beating Borkoski "looked very bad and when I went to feel his pulse it was hard to find. I then turned to Lyster and said: 'You better quit beating this man, he is in a critical condition.'"

"What happened then?" Musmanno asked.

"They quit beating him for a while," the doctor said, "but as soon as he began to look better, Lysert started to beat him again."

Mrs. Borkoski, widow of the slain miner, knew nothing of her husband's death except what she had been told. She had believed him to be working at the time he was being beaten. When she learned the purpose of Musmanno's visit she declared:

LEGISLATOR CONFIDENT

"I did not like to see John go that way, but if his death means the end of the coal and iron police in this district, I am satisfied.

"It has happened once and it will happen again unless they are abolished."

"The outrages of the Cossacks in the heyday of the czaristic regime were paltry offenses compared to this killing," Musmanno declared, at the conclusion of his investigation.

"I am convinced that with the evidence I have gathered here today, the legislature will pass my bill abolishing such policemen."

BROWN'S TRIAL NEARS JURY

the customary Saturday recess or holding court today to complete the case. Eight jurors favoring a Saturday session stood in the box when Judge Gibson asked for a vote. Under ordinary circumstances, the jurors' term of service would end with this week.

The defense, which rested yesterday, consumed about one day out of the two weeks occupied by the trial. The defendant was not called to the stand to testify in his own defense. His brother, Jesse R. Brown, was the chief defense witness.

He told of casually meeting Chauncey M. Swift and D. M. Feichert through a coal broker of Altoona, now dead, and said the notes discounted by defendant were accepted upon the latter's recommendation. Government agents testified they were unable to find most of the makers of notes alleged to have been fictitious.

PROPERTY APPRAISED

Samuel Taylor, Pittsburgh mining engineer, appraised the property of the United Coal Mining Corporation, owned by Brown, at $60,000 in 1925, to establish that the notes indorsed by Brown had financial support at that time.

Calvin Hesse, Pittsburgh accountant, defense witness, testified as to the financial condition of the coal company at that time and said that the Darby-Old Virginia Coal Company was the only customer of the coal company.

Hesse admitted on cross-examination by Government Counsel James I. Marsh that he was unable to find on the books of the coal company any accounts with the Darby-Virginia Company, the Addington Mills Corporation and the Kessner Manufacturing Company, whose acceptances were discounted by defendant.

SLEDCAROMS FROM AUTO INTO WALL

Two brothers were believed dying in the Pittsburgh Hospital following a coasting accident on the Nadine road, Penn Township. Their sled crashed into an automobile, hurling the boys to the roadway. The auto swerved and wrecked against a retaining wall.

The injured coasters are Gray Brunner, 7, of Nadine road, Penn Township, suffering from a fractured skull and his brother, Jack Brunner, 10, suffering from a probable fracture of the skull.

According to police, the boys were coasting down Nadine road near the Lincoln avenue extension. The automobile, driven by C. W. McIlrath, 26, of Verona, was coming up the hill. The boys' sled crashed into the rear wheel of McIlrath's machine, hurling them into the road.

McIlrath rushed them to the hospital in another machine, then was taken into custody by police.

He was released on $1,000 bond pending the outcome of the youths' injuries.

Porter to Ask U. S. to Act Against Trade in Drugs

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Under a resolution to be presented to the Lower House by Representative Stephen G. Porter, of Pittsburgh, President Coolidge is asked to call upon all foreign powers signatory to The Hague opium treaty to take steps toward full compliance with provisions of the instrument which are designed to bring about proper control of international narcotic production.

In an extensive preamble, the Porter resolution lays the blame on foreign powers for the continued bootleg traffic in habit-forming drugs. American pharmaceutical houses, he declares, have co-operated fully with government enforcement agents in preventing the diversion of narcotics produced in the United States, so that only a negligible quantity finds its way into illegitimate channels. Practically all of the vast quantity of narcotics sold in the United States by "dope-peddlers," he asserts, is smuggled in from countries which are parties to The Hague opium convention.

informed that some of the prescriptions under investigation had been forged. And he also pointed out that he learned Miss Rubens had been addicted to drugs before she became his patient. Nor did he receive the amount of money given in state reports as the sum paid him by the film star, he declared.

California Protests

The state, through its board of medical examiners, considers the policy of compromising for cash violations of the Harrison narcotic act such a grave menace to its narcotic control program that it caused formal protests to be sent to Washington and new laws introduced in Sacramento.

The Narcotic Division of the Internal Revenue Department says that only cases of "technical violations" are compromised for cash.

Here is what the State and Federal investigations of the case involving Miss Rubens and Dr. Citron reveal, in official reports:

1.—Tubes of morphine, costing at wholesale 50c each, were sold to the film actress at $50 every few days.

2.—This deadly drug, slowly gripping Miss Rubens in its relentless tentacles in the guise of temporary relief, was obtained under prescriptions signed by Dr. Citron.

Fictitious Names

3.—Out of the 31 prescriptions, now in possession of Federal Narcotic Agent Harry V. Williamson, in charge of California and Nevada, five were issued in the name of a relative of the young victim. The person whose name was written on the prescription was not even in Los Angeles County. Two other prescriptions, which Dr. Citron is said to have admitted were for morphine for Miss Rubens, were written for fictitious persons at fictitious addresses and for a former patient of the doctor, long ago reported as discharged from his care.

4.—On some days two prescriptions, each for a full tube of morphine, were issued. In one instance, documents in the hands of the authorities show, on September 22, 1928, there appeared on the books of Dr. Citron the charges of $75 and $25—an average of $50 a visit.

$1,000 Paid in Month

5.—Cancelled checks, statements sent to the home of Miss Rubens, at 1745 North Wilton avenue, and sheets taken from Dr. Citron's office records, show that nearly $1,000 in checks and cash were paid by Miss Rubens to Dr. Citron between September 21 and October 25, 1928. Several checks given in payment for these professional services have been held up at the bank.

6.—Twenty-four of the prescriptions were written in the name of Mrs. Ricardo Cortez, Miss Rubens' legal name. "These the doctor had filled himself and then sold the narcotics to her for $50," a portion of the State report on the case reads.

Although the reports on file in San Francisco state that Dr. Citron "has been selling narcotics to Miss Alma Rubens in the last few months" (having sold her some $1,300), the doctor's own records list the "debits" as "office calls," "office vists" and "night visits," and $25, $50 and $75 each.

Two of these vists, one listed on the 14th and one on the 16th of October, carry notations "2 RX" and charges of $125 and $100, respectively. The $125 charge is accompanied by a notation "...ntal office 6 a. m."

Doctor Admits Sales

Under date of December 7, 1928, the State inspector's report sent to San Francisco offices declares:

"The doctor (Citron) told Federal Narcotic Agent Monroy and Inspector Hugh Lenehan, of the State Board of Pharmacy, that he never saw—(the relative in whose name prescriptions were issued) and that he had prescribed for her twice, as noted in the bill, but could not explain how there were five prescriptions for her."

Search of the records at the office of the State Board of Medical Examiners in San Francisco discloses an earlier report, under date of November 13, in which William A. Byrne, assistant special agent, states:

"Dr. Citron admits selling the narcotics and at present the case is about to be compromised for $1,500."

Several weeks later, when the Examiner began its investigation, Federal agents admitted that offers in compromise had been made and that the sum then under discussion had been raised to $2,500. The negotiations for cash settlement of these alleged violations of the Harrison narcotic act are said to have reached a point where attorneys representing Dr. Citron conferred with federal and state agents handling the case.

Thousands "Settle"

This, in brief, is a cross-section of the charges against Dr. Citron by the state officials. If the cash compromise reported above is accepted by the commissioner of prohibition, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C., it will become one of the thousands settled by the department out of court.

While the Examiner does not believe that all cases thus settled for cash involve major violations, records of the Internal Revenue Department show that out of 8,653 cases reported during fiscal year of 1928, 4,850 were tried in courts and 1,221 were "compromised" for cash.

And from the compromises—compromises involving the Harrison narcotic act—the United States treasury received exactly $67,210.95.

What of Relatives?

Just what the State of California and various bodies earnestly engaged in efforts to suppress the horrible menace of drug addiction in the United States think of the policy of cash compromise of Harrison narcotic law violations is shown in remarkable correspondence exchanged between Sacramento and Washington, and will be presented in detail later.

To the anguished relatives of Alma Rubens her present plight is an overwhelming tragedy and not a "technical violation" or a "weak and doubtful case."

Behind the cold, legal phraseology of reports, statistics and explanations of officials involved, there was revealed to the Examiner in its investigation an appalling picture of physical tortures and mental distress to the young cinema star and her loved ones.

The frantic search for more and more drugs, the wasting health and blasted hopes, heroic efforts at rehabilitation balked by circumstances and acts now under investigation—one by one these passed in review as the despondent relatives told how Alma battled bravely against the living death that had her in its grip.

That battle is still going on.

Alma a Shadow

"We fear for Alma's life. She is just a shadow of her old self. Ruined, broken down—a slave to a habit," her sister, Mrs. Hazel Large told the Examiner.

Dr. Citron last night denied that he sold morphine to Miss Rubens, denied that he delivered the deadly drug to her, denied that he wrote prescriptions under fictitious names and for non-existing patients, and said that the Federal officers investigating the case informed him that a number of the prescriptions held by them had been forged.

"I did not know Miss Rubens was an addict when I took her case. I did not sell her any narcotics. Those prescriptions had been forged, by whom I do not know," he said.

"How do you account, then, for the fact that dates on these prescriptions you say are forged seem to correspond to the dates of house and office visits you have listed in your own books, with charges of $50 or more a visit?" Dr. Citron was asked.

"Some prescriptions were given by me to Miss Rubens in good faith, and for ailments I thought she had. When I discovered that she was an addict, I became suspicious and dropped the case," he answered.

Compromise Discussed

Then Dr. Citron admitted that overtures looking toward a compromise with the Federal government were discussed with him.

He also admitted that on one occasion he did go to a drug store and filled his own prescription for the film actress.

"That was one morning when she fainted in my office. She came there early in the morning and called me from my home. She was on the floor, kicking, screaming and in a terrible condition. I walked down to the drug store—in fact, I walked a long distance to find a drug store, and gave her the medicine because in my professional judgment I felt that she needed it," Dr. Citron explained.

"But Doctor, if all those prescriptions were forged, how do you account for the charges of $50 and more for each visit and for the fact that there appear to be as many prescriptions as the number of visits recorded in your own books?" the physician was asked.

"A Hard Case"

"I charged Miss Rubens for the visits. She was a hard case. She never called me unless it was at all sorts of early hours. One or two in the morning. She was a hard case and the charges reflect that condition," he replied.

These statements Dr. Citron made early in the evening.

Later, after consulting his attorneys, he called the Examiner and said that inasmuch as no formal charge had been made and no accusation filed against him in any court, he would stand on his rights as a professional man and refuse to make any statement.

The Examiner has made every effort to obtain Dr. Citron's side of the story and will present it in more detail when he makes it available.

In answer to inquiries for the government's side in the policy of accepting cash compromises in Harrison narcotic act violation, the Examiner obtained statements from the Washington officials and has been informed that the government considers the Harrison narcotic act a revenue measure.

What State Thinks

Here is what California thinks of the practice:

In its formal report to Gov. C. C. Young, the State Board of Medical Examiners declares under date of January 2, 1929:

"As long as our Federal Narcotic Enforcement Bureau considers the Harrison narcotic act from the standpoint of revenue rather than as a punitive measure, we feel that California's hospitalization project designed to reclaim the narcotic addict will be seriously handicapped.

"Just why those in authority at Washington accept cash offers in compromise of charges of alleged narcotic traffic is beyond our comprehension. And we confess our inability to understand just where lies the line that separates the narcotic offender haled before a court for trial from offenders who pay $5,000 cash to compromise an alleged violation of the Harrison narcotic act.

$5,000 Closes Case

"In 1927, one of our California physicians was arrested on a charge of violation of the Harrison narcotic act and regardless of protest by the Collector of Internal Revenue as well as attorney for the Board of Medical Examiners it was learned after much correspondence that in 1919 the total offer in compromise (made by the proprietor of a drug store and the doctor) in the amount of $5,000 had been accepted and the case closed.

"Another California licenciate charged with violation of the Harrison narcotic act evidently carried the rabbit's foot, for his offer of $5,000 in compromise was accepted, according to reports in our file, by the Treasury Department, Internal Revenue Service, Narcotic Division, Washington, D. C."

Efforts of the California medical officials to obtain from Washington details of the charges against physicians whose asserted violations were compromised for cash met with replies that it was not the policy of the bureau (Internal Revenue) to furnish information relative to the gravity of the offenses committed by an alleged violator.

This policy was attacked by the California authorities, and after much negotiations a ruling finally was obtained allowing the commissioner of prohibition at Washington to supply the desired information, when in his judgment this action was desired.

Another Approach

"However," the State Medical Board's report continues, "according to reports compromise is still a recognized method of procedure. One of our licentiates recently related that following an investigation of alleged narcotic derelictions he had been approached with an offer of compromise of $2,500."

Dr. Charles B. Pinkham is known to have in his possession and in the files of the State Board of Medical Examiners in San Francisco complete files of the alleged irregularities in the Rubens prescriptions.

Pressed for its views on compromising for cash violations of the Harrison act, the Washington officials gave the following answers:

"Only those cases are compromised on which there is grave doubt as to the possibility of obtaining convictions in court. Each case is settled on its merits. The procedure is for a violator to offer a cash compromise. It may be as high as $5,000, although few of this amount are on record.

"The narcotic division either rejects the offer or decides what is a fair amount as a compromise. When the compromise figure is decided the case is referred to the commissioner of prohibition for final approval. A compromise may be effected even after an indictment. In that case the district attorney passes on it and approval also is obtained from the attorney general's office. It is the feeling of the narcotic division that the compromise arrangement constitutes, in effect, a fine in those cases which are so weak a conviction in court would be difficult."

ADVISORY UNIT INDORSES WARNING

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Co-operation by all banks that are members of the Federal Reserve System in an effort to prevent the use of Federal Reserve credit for speculative purposes has been suggested by the Federal Advisory Council.

This proposal was made by the council at the end of a two-day session here at which the action of the Federal Reserve Board, when it issued a sharp warning against speculation, was warmly indorsed.

The Federal Advisory Council is composed of one member from each Federal Reserve District and it acts in an advisory capacity to the board, having the power to recommend changes in the discount rate. Its action was taken to mean that sentiment for a curbing of speculation had chrystallized in the Federal Reserve System and that further steps toward that end may be expected. The board already has warned that it would take whatever measures it thought necessary.

The statement issued by the advisory council said:

"The Federal Advisory Council approves the action of the Federal Reserve Board in instructing the Federal Reserve banks to prevent, as far as possible, the diversion of Federal Reserve funds for the purpose of carrying loans based on securities. The Federal Advisory Council suggests that all member banks in each district be asked directly by the Federal Reserve Bank of the district to cooperate in order to attain the end desired. The council believes beneficial results can be attained in this manner."

U. S. AND JAPAN FAVOR SHIP PARLEY BID

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Reports that another naval armament limitations conference was in the making have taken shape with the announcement by Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador, that his government plans to take the initiative toward such a conference.

The United States and Japan are both believed to favor an armament parley. The Washington government has received no direct word from Great Britain. This, and the fact that the next administration probably will have to deal with the problem, has impelled the administration to proceed cautiously, but word has gone out that the United States is maintaining its traditional attitude of readiness to participate in such a movement.

Baron Tanaka, Japanese foreign minister, recently suggested that it might be well to advance the date of the conference set for 1931.

It is thought that the British government will propose a preliminary conference to prepare for the 1931 parley when phases of the agreement reached at the Washington conference in 1921 come up for review. The number of capital ships and their tonnage and armament were limited at the 1921 meeting. The tonnage of cruisers also was limited to 10,000 tons each and their maximum armament was limited to an eight-inch gun, but no restriction was placed on the number of cruisers to be built by each nation.

It is believed that at the next conference a determined effort will be made to limit auxiliary ships and to arrive at a different method of comparing fleet strength other than by tonnage figures and gun caliber.

Sir Esme explained that his government had not indicated its attitude heretofore because the bill authorizing 15 cruisers and one aircraft carrier was pending before Congress. He declared that now that this bill had become a law that there was reason to believe: "A further effort before long will be made to reach an agreement between the principal naval powers of the world for the limitation of naval armaments."

PITTSBURGHER HURT IN CRASH

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Three Lafayette students and two older men were injured here early today in an automobile crash in Central Park when John K. Simons, of Glen Ridge, N. The three students were the most seriously injured. They are Cooper Wise, 21, of this city; John Searles, 19, of 5589 Bryant street, Pittsburgh, and Robert Krick, 20, of 430 Meadowbrook avenue, St. Davids.

Simons was slightly cut, as was Theodore Griffith, of Downingtown, who disappeared after the crash.

Mrs. E. J. Searles, mother of John, who was graduated from Peabody High School last year, said today that she was leaving tonight or tomorrow morning for Allentown.

The low that was centered over Southern Texas yesterday morning moved rather rapidly northeastward. This morning it is centered over the Middle Atlantic coast, lowest barometer 29.78 inches, at Atlantic City, and extends in the form of a trough southward over the Coast states. It produced moderately heavy rains over Alabama, Georgia and the Carolinas, and it is still rainy over that section.

The Northwest low is now centered over Southern Minnesota and Eastern South Dakota, lowest barometer 29.60 inches, at Huron. St. Paul and Sioux City, and covers the Northern and Central Plains states. It is producing only light snow over Minnesota, and at scattered other places in the Northwest.

The temperature changes were slight in the states, but generally toward warmer over the Ohio Valley states and the central plains. Over the Central States west and the border states it is much colder.

River Conditions.

The rivers continue stationary at low stages. Stage at Pittsburgh is 10.9 feet; Dam No. 2, 8.5, and Dam No. 6, 8.0 feet. The dams are up. The Ohio River is clear of ice.

STONE, VETERAN A. P. CHIEF, DIES

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Melville E. Stone, for 28 years general manager of the Associated Press and for half a century an outstanding figure in journalism, died last night at his home, 120 East Seventy-fifth street.

In his eighty-first year, he had been in failing health for four months. Death came quietly at 8:50 p. m. With him were his wife and daughter. The cause of death was arterio-sclerosis.

In 1921 Mr. Stone retired as general manager of the Associated Press because of age and became counselor and secretary. He served as counselor until his death.

His journalistic career, which began when he was 20, spanned one of the most vital epochs in newsgathering and distribution and was closely identified with it. The son of a Methodist circuit rider, he was successively manufacturer, newspaper publisher and banker until at the age of 45 he began his life work in the direction of unbiased and accurate co-operative news gathering and distribution.

Thibutes to Mr. Stone were paid after his death by persons prominent in various fields of activity. There were references to him as "a true patriot." His contribution to journalism was described as "one of the greatest monuments an international figure has ever had." Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times and one of the directors of the Associated Press, said that Mr. Stone, possessing the business qualifications of a Gary, a field of an Armour, accepted an opportunity for service to his fellow man and in old age had reason to feel that he had been fully compensated for the fortunes he sacrificed.

Mrs. Martha McFarland Stone, whom he married in Chicago in 1869, survives him as do his daughter, Miss Elizabeth Creighton Stone, and his brother, Prof. Ormond Stone, formerly of the faculty of the University of Virginia. His two sons, Herbert S. Stone and Melville E. Stone, Jr., died before he did.

FORD THINKS U. S. DRY; EXECUTIONS 'ALL WRONG'

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN,
International News Service.

FORT MYERS, Fla., Feb. 16.—Henry Ford, in an exclusive interview today, deplored agitation for a bigger United States navy, declared there was "nothing wrong" with prohibition or its enforcement, expressed his opposition to capital punishment and strongly advocated the putting through of the St. Lawrence River project which would give the cities of the Great Lakes an outlet to the sea.

"What is your reaction to the prohibition law and the manner in which it is enforced?" Mr. Ford was asked.

"Not a thing wrong with it," he replied. "The country is cleaning up. It is becoming dry rapidly in spite of all the statements you hear to the contrary. The cities, of course, are the last to be dried up, but the job is being done. The rural sections, which are the heart of the world, always have been dry."

WOULD TRAIN YOUNG

Asked how the country should combat the apparent increase in crime and racketeering, he replied:

"Crime in one sense is a revolt of a certain class of young fellows against conditions. They are handicapped in various ways and no one is taking an interest in them.

"If people took more interest in the younger folk and guided them along the right path there would be no crime."

Ford disclosed during his remarks on this subject that he has been lending a helping hand to young people as well as to men with criminal records. There are now between 800 and 900 men who served prison sentences working in Ford's factories, and he says, "making good."

"Show them you trust them and they will react in the right way," Ford said. "We put them in trusted positions and we do not tell anybody who are the employes with the prison records. We give them a chance."

"WAR BUSINESS WILL GO"

Ford termed the big Navy program a "joke." He said that in this enlightened age the people do not want a big Navy. He said that ones who want the bigger U. S. Navy "will be the ones to create a job for it." He does not believe the United States should try to keep its Navy on a parity with Great Britain's, or any other nation.

"I am against this kind of competition," he said. "International disputes should be settled by common sense rather than by destruction.

"The war business will go. In this day of the radio, the airplane, the phonographs, the motor car, the newspapers and the magazines, the people are becoming too intelligent to tolerate being hoodwinked much longer."

EXECUTIONS "WRONG"

Capital punishment is "all wrong," Ford declared when asked his views on this subject. He said he had read the recent book of Warden Lewis E. Lawes, of Sing Sing prison and he praised the author as a man of the type "who does things for others" and who has the right idea on the question of crime solution.

"It does not do a bit of good to put a person out of the way for committing a crime. Capital punishment is no deterrent. People who commit major crimes should be taken care of in some institution.

"The day is coming when society will know in advance what individuals are dangerous. Criminal tendencies will be detected in advance, and counteracted."

"What do you think of the St. Lawrence River project?"

"It ought to be worked out," replied Mr. Ford. "It will be worked out and it ought to be done as fast as possible. It would be a good thing the world over. Anything that taps commerce, as this would do, taps everything."

PROBE OF NAVY FUND PLANNED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—President Coolidge recommended $12,370,000, available after June 30, 1929, for construction on the ships called for in the cruiser bill because he understood that no funds were desired by Senate and House leaders for work on the warcraft during the current fiscal year, which ends June 30.

The President got this impression from conferences with legislators and he feels that it will make little difference so far as the building of the ships are concerned whether work is postponed on them until after the beginning of the next fiscal year, or not. He thinks that construction should be postponed until after June 30, because of the condition of the treasury.

Following the President's recommendation, the Senate Appropriations Committee voted to make $700,000 available for construction of the cruisers during the present fiscal year. On the House side, some feel that the $12,370,000 recommended by the President is inadequate and Chairman Britten, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, has announced that as soon as the Senate completes work on the naval supply bill that he would inquire as to whether the budget bureau did not "arbitrarily" cut down the sum proposed by the Navy Department to get the building program under way.

N. Y. Police Close Show, Arrest Cast

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—The cast of the play "My Girl Friday" which opened Tuesday at the Republic Theater, was arrested at the close of last night's performance on a charge of participating in an indecent show.

Police censors reported parts of it were objectionable. A crowd estimated at 5,000 persons gathered around the stage doors as the patrol wagon drove up to take the 13 players to the police station.

1928 SETS LOW DRUNK ARREST RECORD

For the first time since prohibition, a decrease in arrests for drunkenness in the city, is shown in the annual report of the Bureau of Police for 1928 filed today by Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh.

During the past year, police in all districts of the city arrested 31,759 persons, who imbibed too freely of beverage containing more than one-half of 1 per cent. In 1927 the number of arrests for drunkenness was 34,070, the records at police headquarters show.

FEWER MURDERS, TOO

A slump in murders in the city also occurred in 1928 over the previous year. Last year 53 murders were committed, compared to 70 in 1927.

"I do not believe the decrease in drunkenness last year was due to prohibition being inforced," Superintendent Walsh said. "Just as many persons, if not more, are drinking today, than before the country went dry."

Supt. Walsh said that possibly more persons under the influence of liquor escaped peing arrested last year than the previous year.

"I still believe prohibition is a failure," was his conclusion.

DETECTIVE PRAISED

Members of the detective bureau and homicide squad are commended by Supt. Walsh and Public Safety Director James M. Clark for the efficient way they performed their duties last year. City detectives in 1928 recovered personal property stolen amounting to $108,571. This figure does not include the recovery of 3,896 automobiles recovered by the motor division.

Highlights of the reports are:

	1928.	1927.
Total arrests	58,779	54,847
Drunkenness	31,759	34,070
Murders committed	53	70
Murderers apprehended ..	36	59
Murderers still at large..	17	11
Reckless driving	4,991	4,399
Liquor laws	107	92
Disorderly conduct	8,235	9,349
Suspicious persons	9,208	10,499
Keeping disorderly house.	1,591	1,698
Visiting disorderly house.	3,872	4,186

The motor division established an enviable record last year when members recovered 3,896 out of 4,280 automobiles reported stolen during the year.

EXPERIENCE IN JAIL TEACHES NILS ASTHER TO BEWARE OF MOTOR POLICE

By DOROTHY HERZOG.

(Copyright, 1929, Premier Syndicate.)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 16.

NILS ASTHER may be the answer to a maiden's prayer, but he has troubles far removed from the romantic. To begin with, Nils owns a car. He enjoys speeding. Several times motorcycle cops have tagged him with tickets. Mr. Asther thanked them and sped on his way. He considered the cops charming to let him off so easy! Came a night. One always does. Two policemen rang Mr. Asther's doorbell—and not for fun. Mr. Asther accompanied them to the caboose. Mr. Asther remained for hours until sufficient funds were obtained to meet the neglected speed tickets. The other morn Nils started for the studio. Sedately, this time. A mere 50 miles per. He came abreast of a car traveling in the same direction and was on the verge of skimming past when his optics espied white caps gracing two heads. He slowed up and proceeded behind the car. Imagine his chagrin when it turned in at a milk plant and he discovered the white caps were mere milkmen!

Nils Asther.

Dick Arlen was rehearsing an outloud scene when Lothar Mendes entered. Lothar seemed to be suffering. He motioned to his shoes. He explained they cost $40 American money and they hurt. He offered them to Dick. Dick tried them on. They fit like old friends. "You can have them," said Lothar. Swell, but Dick wished to reciprocate. Lothar finally consented to accept a box of cigars, naming the brand. Dick ordered them at the Athletic Club. The name of 'em was unfamiliar to him, but after all it was Lothar's idea. Next night Dick received the bill for the nicotine—$40! Which fifty-fifties the suffering of both Lothar and Arlen.

Film Star Tells About Notables

By MARION DAVIES.

(Personal recollections of famous folk):

Jimmie Walker (Mayor of New York)—Natural, democratic, my idea of a regular.

Zuloaga (Spanish artist)—Has the appearance of an American business man. Enjoys discussing bull fighting. One of his closest friends is the famous toreador, Del Monte. The Babe Ruth of Spain.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont (society matron)—Kind, very concerned about others' interests and welfare.

Arnold Bennett (writer)—Analytical; greedy to plumb the moods and reactions of others.

Charlie Chaplin, generous to a fault with his friends. A level-headed genius.

Charlie Chaplin

Duse (Italian artiste) — Sweet, sympathetic frag-ile, with the tragedy of darkness and the mellowness of wisdom in her magnificent eyes.

Morris Gest (stage producer)—Honest, artistic, faithful even financially to an ideal.

Greta Garbo as Style Example

HOWARD GREER, fashion director, says:

When Greta Garbo went home to Sweden, she chose sports costumes that might be practical both for the ocean voyage and the cold climate of her country. One sports outfit, worn under a coat of grey tapin, was of two tones of blues. The jumper, composed of the two tones, was put together in modern geometric fashion. The skirt was dark blue. An ample scarf of the lighter tone accompanied the costume.

SCREEN SCRIBS: "Mickey" Loew chucking a birthday party for Buster Collier, Slews of folk present . . . George Abbott, W. K., Manhattan, playwright, and stage director, is due in our midst shortly. Um, to write and direct for Famous Players. . . . Lowell Sherman is playing in San Francisco these days. No headlines. Just "The Guardsman," being the same play he traipsed in in Hollywood. . . .

Norma Talmadge

Norma Talmadge hasn't a picture yet. United Artists is up to its usual vacillation in her case. But Norman isn't worried. She trekked to Callente and the races over the week-end. . . . Things are pretty yawn-y in the village for the nonce. Rip Van Winkle would be in his element here. . . . And—that's all.

In the Sheridan Square the first half of next week "Fugitives," with Madge Bellamy and Don Terry, will be on the screen.

OLD MAN WINTER :-: NEWEST HERO :-: OF FILM STARS

Dorothy Janis and Raquel Torres, movie actresses, have gone in for the winter stuff.

From toboggan riding, the happy pair have turned to ski racing. The locale is Big Pines in the Los Angeles County Park. Both Dorothy and Raquel are new M-G-M stars.

The traditional triangle again. This time a snow man is the center of attraction.

Away they go—on skates now, in a race that climaxed their day's outing with Old Man Winter. "We're coming back often," they told park attendants.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

BARRY'S DILEMMA

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

THERE was only one redeeming feature about the situation in which Barry Caswell found himself the morning after his cousin Christine's party, and that was the fact that Phyllis Leighton, one of the two girls to whom he was now engaged, had sailed for Europe on a six months' tour.

Roped in for an extra man at Christine's dance at her country home, he had wandered out on the lawn where a low-hung, honey-colored moon cast a shimmer of witchery over everything. Startled by a sound as of smothered sobbing, he had turned to discover, prone on a stone settee partly hidden within a semi-circle of hydrangeas, the figure of a girl he had known all his life.

Moved by pity and the entrancing loveliness of a tear-drenched face lifted from two slender hands, he raised her gently to her feet, only to find, a few minutes later, her head on his shoulder and her soft voice whispering, "I've always cared, Barry, ever since we were children!"

Never had Barry put in as miserable a night as the one which followed, what with berating himself for not telling Sylvia at once about Phyllis, Phyllis for refusing in the first place to announce their engagement until her return, Sylvia for mistaking compassion for a proposal.

He tossed restlessly until nearly dawn, then fell asleep and woke several hours later with wisps of a half-formulated plan floating about in his brain.

By the time he was ready to sit down to his grapefruit, coffee, eggs, bacon and toast, he had decided to lose not an hour, not a second, in putting into effect this plans which was simple enough in accomplishment.

The gist of the scheme was this. To get Sylvia enamored of somebody else.

Fortunately for his purpose, there was a somebody else at hand. George Arlington, who roomed with him, who had never met Sylvia, and who was very susceptible to pretty girls.

When George appeared, Barry was ready with a casual, break-it-gently sort of remark.

"You and I," he said, "are giving a little dinner party tonight."

"Are we?" asked George. "Where's the morning paper?"

"For my cousin and her family and an old school chum of mine, Sylvia Parsons."

"Who is Sylvia?"

"A very nice girl," retorted Barry, resolved to spring Sylvia's blonde beauty on an unprepared George. "Kind hearted and fond of animals."

"I get you. The wholesome sort that will make some man a good wife, but not me. Where's the morning paper?"

"I don't see it," said Barry, who was sitting on it. Before he could let George get hold of it he must make sure that Sylvia had not impulsively telephoned the news of their engagement to all the metropolitan dailies. He considered Sylvia a very impulsive girl.

As a matter of fact, leaving almost immediately for Christine's to arrange about the dinner in his apartment that evening, Barry forgot the paper entirely.

The first half of the dinner party passed off auspiciously enough as the initial move in Barry's campaign.

George had appeared as startled as Barry could wish when Sylvia, exquisitely furred, her eyes starry and her color high, entered the room.

His reproachful glance flung at Barry said plainly enough, "Why did you deceive me?"

Barry, watching them both, allowed himself to picture the next few weeks during which Sylvia, little by little, would transfer her impulsive young affections to his roommate. He saw himself, relinquishing her sadly but resolutely.

"Your happiness, Sylvia," he heard himself saying, "is the one aim of my life. George will be good to you."

Deviled crabs had followed the soup and chicken Maryland the crabs and ices and coffee and cheese were to come when the telephone rang.

Barry rose and went out into the hall, carefully closing the door to shut out the chatter from the dining room.

"Hello—hello—"

"Who? Who?"

"Ye Gods! When?"

"No—yes—no—"

"No, I'll come right over. No, I'm—I'm just knocked all of a heap, you know!"

He looked it—knocked all of a heap—when George, to whom he had called weakly, came out and saw him.

"George," he said, with a white strained look, "I'm in an awful mess. It's Phyllis Leighton, the other girl I'm engaged to. No, of course, you don't understand, George. Am I asking you to understand? No, certainly not. But what you can understand, is this. Get out the bridge tables and keep them playing until I get back. Make up any excuse you like for my absence. If I don't come back—well, don't ever try to find me. Oh, why didn't I look at the morning paper!" and Barry groaned.

On the stroke of 11, Barry came in and took up his stand quietly behind Sylvia's chair. Ignoring the quizzical look flung him by George, he seemed intent upon the play.

Then, quite suddenly, "Do any of you know Phyllis Leighton?" he inquired.

"Seems to me I have heard her mentioned quite recently," said George.

"Her picture was in this morning's paper," said Sylvia.

"Quite so," said Barry. "She sailed a week or two ago for Europe. As a matter of fact, I was—er—one of those who saw her off. For the benefit of any who did not see this morning's paper—or am I the only person in the large city of New York who did not have that pleasure? You didn't either, George?—I will inform you that while on shipboard she fell violently in love with a well-known playright. They turned back at Southampton to be married here tomorrow. As a friend of—er—long standing, she sent for me to tell me about it."

"I'm so glad she found somebody!" said Sylvia softly, and there was an odd little light in her lovely eyes. Then she turned to Christine. "Remember the night of your dance, Chris? That very afternoon I received a letter from Betty Evans, who told of seeing some friends off to Europe and mentioned that Phyllis Leighton was there bidding a very affectionate farewell to some man. She told me his name, too. Let me see if I can remember what it was—"

"See here, Sylvia," broke in Barry quickly, "it—it isn't necessary to play a high card when the trick is already yours!"

"I am going through the Change of Life. At times I would cry for hours. I got tired of going to the doctor so I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before I had taken the first bottle I began to get better. I have taken eight bottles now. I feel that it has saved my life, also doctor's bills. I work for a family of six, washing, cooking and do all my own work. People say I look like 25."—Mrs. Cora Calahan.

"Lydia E. Pinkham did for me what doctors failed to do. When the Change of Life began I was very poorly. Now at 55 I do all my own work, attend two dances a week and it is hard to make people believe I am over 40. I never see a woman in ill health but I advocate your medicine because I know its value. Every woman should take it, not just for a month or two but until they have passed the critical period."—Mrs. F. C. Helming.

MUSIC

Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra

SYRIA MOSQUE

PROGRAM.

Prelude and Fugue, in C sharp minor Bach
Symphony No. 4, in E minor, Op. 98 ..... Brahms
Scherzo—"The Sorcerer's Apprentice" ..... Dukas
Adagio, from Divertimento No. 15, for String Orchestra ..... Mozart
Overture, "The Russian Easter," Op. 36 ..... Rimsky-Korsakow

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra brought a musical week to a close last night in Syria Mosque with a program that could not intrigue a large audience, nor cause those present to forget the greater thrills of the week.

Henri Verbrugghen conducts a well-schooled orchestra. Such a one would be a boon to Pittsburgh, if it were possible to hear it weekly. His ensemble proceeds with fine precision, all climaxes have sufficient volume, and there is a scholarly nicety that makes up for greater warmth to be found in the larger string choirs of other orchestras.

Verbrugghen himself orchestrated the Bach fuge. It certainly must have been a more interesting exercise for the conductor than for the public, for it lacked all feeling of the original piano composition. The music that we find in Brahms' Fourth Symphony is the kind that made critics at first style it cryptic. The truth is that here Brahms allowed his mathematics to run away with him, and while there is nothing under cover, there is a lack of the genius and free inspiration that created his early symphonies.

Dukas' scherzo seems doomed to replace the formerly ubiquitous Debussy "Afternoon of a Faun" on Pittsburgh programs. It was given a most spirited reading, however, and it is well to remember this composition which came at the beginning of the cavalcade of more modern extravagances in harmony and realistic writing. The Mozart fragment came in a happy place, its many delicate figures making possible the broad strokes of the Russian hymn in Rimsky-Korsakow's overture.

A matinee concert will be played this afternoon, with Dvorak's "New World Symphony" and some dances from Strauss' "Fledermaus." J. FRED LISSFELT.

Lack of Salt Kills Animals

EXPERIMENTS show that animals die sooner from a salt free diet than from starvation, as the absence of salt leads to absence of hydrochloric acid in the gastric juice and consequent digestive disorders.

What Women Don't Tell

APPARENTLY, a "well-dressed woman" is one who knows how to leave off a lot of clothes, gracefully.

Undoubtedly, Satan himself could make almost any woman love him, if he took the trouble to convince her that he needed "a good woman's love" to save him.

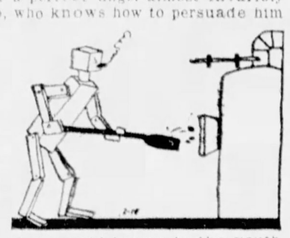
"Mechanical men have been invented, who will soon be doing all the world's monotonous drudgery," according to the news. But don't you believe it! If they are men, they'll wiggle out of the monotonous part, and find a mechanical woman, somewhere, to do it for them.

* * *

The manners and jokes that used to be confined to the barroom appear to have followed the cocktail shaker into the front parlor.

* * *

The man who is looking for a perfect angel almost invariably ends by marrying some little imp, who knows how to persuade him that she needs only a Big Strong Man to change her horns into a halo.



* * *

When a man calls a doctor, it is a sign that he is sick; but but when a woman calls a doctor, it may be only a sign that she's bored, that she's feeling sorry for herself, or that she can't think of any other way to attract a little attention.

* * *

It is terrible to contemplate what would happen to the youth of this glorious country, if there should suddenly be a pomade shortage or a lipstick famine!

* * *

Alas, the average girl seems to think that marriage is a sleight-of-hand performance which will turn a fascinating philanderer into a one-woman-man.

Love's Awakening

A Continuation of Love's Embers

By ADELE GARRISON

Katherine's Tact and Insistence Prevent a Possible Scene

"I DON'T believe I'd do that just now," I said slowly, when Katherine said that she meant to frighten Marion about her mother's nerves and health.

The little nurse looked at me attentively.

"Why not?"

"Because Marion's too transparent—and—tempestuous—and Lillian too shrewd. The child couldn't hide her grief and remorse and terror—oh! she'd experience all three—and Lillian would guess we'd been talking to her."

"And she resents criticism of Marion more than anything else," Katherine assented. "All right, Missis Owl, I see, and I'll shut up. But I don't think you ought to, altogether. Couldn't you just drop a hint to Marion, something that wouldn't alarm her too much, and yet would set her thinking?"

"I think I can manage that much," I agreed, "and I'll tackle Harry tomorrow," I added reluctantly.

Katherine laugher suddenly, and I looked at her astonished.

"Poor old Lady Atlas with the weight of the world on her shoulders!" she said. "You do have the worst jobs thrust on you. Let's see! You have to warn Marion delicately that her mother isn't well and to go slow. You have to tackle Harry a trifle less delicately and tell him to go slower. You have to get your father on the job about the Brixton visit, and you have to find out what Mary's up to. When you get through you ought to send in your application for a Cabinet position."

Her affectionate raillery kept echoing in my ears as I went to my own room and prepared for bed. I felt like a conspirator, a meddlesome Matty and a spy, and called myself those names vigorously before I went to sleep. Fortunately I was too tired physically to let anything keep me awake very long, and when I awoke the next morning, although I had the sensation of something unpleasant hanging over me, I was able to see that the tasks before me were justified and necessary.

We were all at breakfast except Lillian.

"She has one of her headaches," Harry reported, "says she doesn't want a thing. But I'll take her up some tea and toast if Katie can make it."

"Oh! surely," I said mechanically, and glanced furtively at Marion. The girl's head had lifted and she was gazing resentfully at him.

"Mother never touches anything when she has a headache," she said defiantly.

"I know, she always had that fool idea," Mr. Underwood declared with the incomprehension of illness so often exhibited by men possessing magnificent physical health. "But some tea and toast will do her good. I'll see that she eats it."

Marion's eyes were blazing now, but before she could speak Katherine's cool quiet tones issued an ultimatum:

"I beg that you will take her nothing," she said in her very best professional manner. "I was with her last night until I got her to sleep, and I know that food or drink of any kind now will only aggravate the nervous indigestion from which she is suffering. Later in the day—yes, but now—nothing but absolute quiet. I would prefer that no one but myself go to her room for several hours."

When Katherine wishes she can throw a stockade of words and manner around a patient of hers which it would take a hardy adventurer to scale. Harry Underwood capitulated promptly and good-naturedly.

"My hands are high above my head, Missis Katherine," he said, laughing. "Take all my money, but please don't bump me off. My insurance has lapsed. Who ever heard of dodging a trained nurse, anyway? You're beaten before you start, eh, Marion."

KISSES

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

"Blush, happy maiden, when you feel
The lips which press Love's glowing seal;
But as the slow years darklier roll,
Grown wiser, the experienced soul
Will own as dearer far than they
The lips which kiss the tears away."
—Elizabeth Akers Allen

KISSES! The seals of love and youth and the open sesame to a young girl's dreams. There's nothing sweeter in the world than the first kiss between lovers! Then a kiss is all the bliss, all the ecstasy, all the heaven on earth rolled into one.

But as the years go on they take so different a meaning. After all the doubts, all the sorrows, all the young joys of life are over, then the kiss takes on an almost sacred meaning. Truly "dearer far than they, the lips which kiss the tears away." Tears shed for the heartaches which comes from love or loved ones. Kisses which comfort and cheer a heart saddened and weary with the burden of years.

And the kiss given for comfort is far more close to the heart, perhaps, than any kiss can be. One remembers the first kiss, but the ones in between are so apt to be forgotten. But the kisses of Life's Autumn! Ah, wait! Some day you'll know what I mean. And then you'll realize the value of the kisses which you so lightly give today.

Horoscopes

Sunday, February 17

SUNDAY'S horoscope accents affairs of church and state, charities and cultural avocations, but there may be distorted or sinister experiences in psychic or mythical matters. Also employment is in jeopardy. Some sudden change or journey is foreseen, and this may be beneficial.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a successful year in spite of some subtle or sinister complexion to affairs, particularly new projects. It is a time for new contracts, for pushing correspondence, writings and publishing, but employment is rather hazardous. Some abrupt change or journey is probable.

A child born on this day may be versatile and have many excellent qualities, while at the same time having some singular or erratic ways. It may be crafty and subtle and may succeed by strategem, rather than straightforwardness.

Monday, February 18

A LONG chain of conflicting planetary configurations point to this day as one of test and endurance, with many conditions threatening to undermine and frustrate. Although menacing and hostile forces are strong, there are several gratifying figures to assist and prosper, affairs handled with alertness, precaution and general discretion. Promotion and honors are in store for the resolute, persistent and upright. Make changes with great prudence.

Those whose birthday it is are at the threshold of a year of great prospects and opportunities, with promotion and honors, but these are also beset with delays, obstructions and subtle dangers. Be on guard and change cautiously.

A child born on this day may have a host of contradictory characteristics. It may be keenly clever, ambitious and enterprising, but also subtle, crafty, erratic and turbulent unless properly trained.

Attempt the end and never stand to doubt; nothing's so hard but search will find it out.—Herrick.

How to Keep Well

Ill-Fitting Shoes May Cause Fatigue

DO you ever think about your shoes and the importance of buying the proper kind? As I observe the footwear of some of my friends I am inclined to doubt it.

DR. COPELAND

If I may be permitted to say so, I must say the fair women of the race are the great offenders in this matter.

The younger and more attractive the person, the more the clerk in the shoe store is permitted to dictate the choice of shoes. He fits the feet to the shoes. He crowds the poor, harmless, voiceless feet into shoes made for another race and another period of history.

Is this sensible? How much wiser it would be to select shoes that really fit—shoes which are comfortable. The shoes make all the difference between happiness and usefulness on the one side and misery on the other.

In pointing out the common defects in shoes, we find, first, that usually they are too short. The toes are crowded and bent out of shape. In consequence, the ends of the toes are turned down and the "knuckles" of the toes are thrown up, to be rubbed by the shoe. This means that corns will be produced.

I think it must be conceded that the shoes we wear are responsible for the corns and callouses. That is, wrongly fitted and improperly shaped shoes are at fault for these defects.

Too many shoes are painfully narrow. The joints and sides of the toes are pressed upon, so that deformities of the feet result.

The heels may be too high. There is a reasonable degree of height in heels. We need not condemn all high heels, but certainly those that are two or three inches high may be very damaging.

You are not sensible if you permit the dictates of fashion to eclipse your good sense. Choose your shoes for comfortable wear. Then your feet won't get tired, necessitating a pair of carpet slippers the minute you get into the house. When your shoes are properly fitted there won't be need of shedding them at the first opportunity.

If the feet are cared for and properly shod, there will be remarkably little fatigue at the end of the day. I am sure it is not standing or walking, so much as it is wrong footwear, that is responsible for aching, painful feet.

There are certain rules which fit most cases. Of course, they are not universal—some feet are so distinctive that special shoes must be provided.

In general, the inside line of the foot is a straight line. From heel to big toe the line should be straight.

The toes must not be pushed and crowded. If you never saw an X-ray of the feet, you have no idea how distorted and twisted the toes may be if the shoes are not right.

Use good sense in clothing your feet. By doing so you may expect to increase your efficiency. It is a real menace to your health to attempt to go ahead with ill-fitting shoes.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Serving Salads

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
In serving fruit salad at an evening luncheon, is it correct to use stemware instead of regular salad plates, and do you then use salad forks? I. K.

FRUIT SALAD should be served on salad plates.

At the Table

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
My cousin and I are having a discussion as to whether or not it is proper, or at all permissible, to blow one's nose at the table. I contend that if one's nose needs attention, use your handkerchief as lightly or delicately as possible, but never should one go through the act of really blowing the nose. Please tell me if I am right. T. M. T.

The Groom's Party

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
I am to have the honor of acting as best man for my friend's wedding. There is to be a reception at the home of the bride, and a theater party later. Is it the duty of the best man to pay for the theater tickets, or is that the groom's responsibility? Or would it be proper to go "Dutch treat"? MR. R. H.

IF the best man wishes to give this party, he may, but there is no reason in the world why he should be expected to give it. The best man should not have any expenses for the wedding. His position is solely as you put it, "having the honor of being best man." The groom would, I think, give this party, but there is no rule about it, for theater parties are not customarily given after weddings, and especially when there is to be a reception.

It would not be proper to go "Dutch treat" for an occasion of this kind. I am sure that the groom will give the party.

"Thank You"

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
Should a lady thank a gentleman for assisting with her wrap? INA.

YES. The gracious, mannerly person always thanks for a service.

She Doesn't Rise

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
When a girl is introduced to a man, is it proper for her to rise when acknowledging the introduction? M. R.

YOU mean, dear M. R.—when a man is introduced to a girl, for this is the correct form. And when the man is introduced to the girl, the girl does not rise.

Naming the Baby

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
When a child was named after its father (Roger Smith, Jr.) and died when an infant, and there is another child, would it be proper and correct to call it Roger Smith, Jr., or Roger Smith, III? SENIOR.

IF you wish to give it the same name, it would have to be Roger Smith, Jr.

At College Dances

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
1. I am invited to an informal college dance and would like to know what I should do with my purse when I check my coat?

2. Should a girl dance all the dances with her escort? JANE.

INSTEAD of a purse, carry an evening bag, and take it with you when you go to the dance place. Leave it on the table when you are dancing.

2. No, not unless they are "terribly in love," and preferably not then. The dances of college dances should be shared with the other friends of the couple, or acquaintances they meet that evening.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

President-Elect Hoover And Wife Luncheon Guests of Burkes

IT'S hard to have to retract a story and say "I was wrong." It has to be done sometimes, though, and this seems to be one of those times. You may remember my telling you that Lent would be absolutely newsless. Now, it seems, a few things are happening. I hear rumors about a few small parties being planned and those folks who have gone away for the season are entertaining quite extensively at their winter homes.

Among the most important members of the Pittsburgh colony at Palm Beach are the James Francis Burkes, and they have been extremely active in all the many social affairs of the Beach ever since they went South. Now, I hear, they are having as their guests at luncheon no less than President-elect Herbert Hoover and Mrs. Hoover. This affair is being given today at the Palm Beach house which the Burkes have taken for the winter. There is no need in reminding you, of course, that Mr. Burke is counsel general of the Republican National Committee.

AND now I have something else to tell you about, and that is a most interesting wedding planned for early April. Carolyn Maccoun, daughter of the Andrew Ellicott Maccouns, of North Braddock, whose engagement to John Hanson Croker, son of the Edward J. Crokers, of Baltimore, was announced in November, has chosen April 2 as her wedding date. The wedding will take place down in Baltimore, where the Maccouns lived until a few years ago, when they came to Pittsburgh, and where the Maccoun girls went back to be presented to society. In fact, you may remember, Carolyn's two younger sisters, Martha Hughes Maccoun and Mary Thorburn Maccoun, made their debut there just this last December at a ball given by their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Parey, Jr., of Baltimore.

The hour set for the ceremony is 4 o'clock, I understand, and it will be performed in Emmanuel Protestant Episcopal Church. Carolyn is having her sister, Mrs. Henry Lewis Prichard, of New York, for her matron of honor, and another sister, Martha, as maid of honor. The bridesmaids are to be Mary Maccoun, also a sister; Martha Stockton, of Princeton, N. J., her cousin; Mrs. Randolph Fenton, who is Mr. Croker's sister; Jane Allderdice, one of our debutantes; Margaret Murray Stump, Alice Carter, Florence Marlatt, of Washington, D. C., and Margaret Mitchell, of New York.

Carolyn was graduated from the Masters' School at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., and she made her debut two years ago in Baltimore. She is a member of the Junior League. Mr. Croker is a graduate of Johns Hopkins University, and he is a member of the Baltimore Club and the Bachelors' Cotillion.

NOW for the travelers! Did you know that one of our debutantes, Margaret Holdship, daughter of the Charles Frederick Holdships, of Sewickley, is at Charleston, S. C., visiting her aunt, Miss Victoria White, who is spending the winter in the South with Mrs. Melchoir B. Chaplin.

Also in the South are Mrs. Frank Semple and her daughter, Anne, of Linden place, Sewickley, who are staying with the John B. Semples at their winter home in Cocoanut Grove, Miami.

Away from home, too, are Mrs. William B. Schiller and the Morgan B. Schillers, who are spending a short time at the Ambassador Hotel in New York.

THE Edward J. Schellentragers, of the Schenley Apartments, are in Los Angeles just now, stopping at the Biltmore Hotel. They plan to visit friends in Pasadena, Santa Monica, Brentwood Hills and Redlands before coming back to Washington for the presidential inauguration. Later, I believe, they expect to go to Florida to complete the season.

Just returned to their home in the Schenley Apartments are Mr. and Mrs. Clarence M. Greene. They had been spending a couple of weeks in New York, staying at the Ambassador Hotel.

AT a luncheon given this afternoon in the University Club by Mrs. Charles D. Wettach, of Walnut street, announcement was made of the engagement of her niece, Miss Louise Elizabeth Mueller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Mueller, of Walnut street, to John Dickson Fulton, son of Mrs. Annie G. Fulton, of Chislett street. Only Miss Mueller's close friends were guests. No date has been set for the wedding.

* * *

THE engagement of Miss Virginia B. Murdock, daughter of James B. Murdock, of Hawthorne street, Canonsburg, to Charles Simon, of Pittsburgh and Wheeling, W. Va., son of Mrs. Elizabeth Simon, of the North Side, has been announced. Miss Murdock is a graduate of the Birmingham School and the University of Pittsburgh and also attended Western College and Wooster College. Mr. Simon is a Pennsylvania State College man and a member of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity.

MRS. P. M. Rudd, of Brookline, gave a modernistic valentine party in her home Thursday night. There were 16 guests and the appointments were in red, white and silver, with a huge red basket trimmed with crystals forming the centerpiece for the supper table.

MARY E. HUMBERT TENT No. 14, Daughters of Union Veterans, gave its annual Lincoln Day dinner Thursday night in the Seventh Avenue Hotel in honor of Comrade Rudolph, department commander of the Grand Army of the Republic of Pennsylvania, and his staff. Louis F. Arensburg, past national commander, and H. W. Ruhe, past department commander, shared honors. There were talks by the veterans present and also by Mrs. Anna Eves, department president of the Pennsylvania Daughters of Union Veterans. Miss Mary Edwards sang, accompanied by Miss Martha McBride, and Chester Walters gave violin numbers, accompanied by Miss Naomi Sayre.

GOV. JOHN S. FISHER and Frederic A. Godcharles will be the speakers at the luncheon the Pittsburgh Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will give in the Hotel Schenley Friday in honor of Washington's Birthday. Dr. Albert E. DR. ANDRE MORIZE, professor of romance languages in Harvard University and director of the Middlebury French School gave an address yesterday morning in the assembly hall of the Pennsylvania College for Women. Delegates to the Pittsburgh conference of the American Association of University of Women were guests of the college for the lecture.

Dr. Morize discussed "The Modern Idea of Culture." Stressing the notion that culture was a general but not an abstract term, the speaker declared: "There is no culture with a capital 'C,' for there is a culture for every age, and there is a culture for this twentieth century as surely as there was a culture for the age of Louis XIV or that of Samuel Johnson."

Ridiculing the idea that culture was a commodity to be bought, Dr. Morize said: "We take up culture as we would tennis or bridge. We do not succeed, not because we are nonintelligent, but because we do not know how to use our intelligence. Culture is not what we think—but how we think. It is the gaining of an attitude of mind. Each person can become cultured, but each becomes cultured in a different way through the fitting in of his mental gaps."

Dr. Morize concluded by giving some general rules for gaining the insight which he defined as culture. "One must understand that to be inteligent is a moral obligation, to think methodically is an unavoidable necessity, to grow demands intellectual curiosity."

Today Dr. Morize spoke at a luncheon given by the Woman's City Club and on Monday he will speak before the Twentieth Century Club.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—The employes council, claiming to represent most of the 25,000 employes of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, has sent a telegram to the larger stockholders asking for re-election of the directors of the concern.

"Do not consider political propaganda or personal desire of an individual, but your interests, our interests and the company's interests, and execute your proxies for the re-election of all present directors."

The employes council or committee represents employes under the Standard Oil's industrial relations plan organized in 1919, and has power to refer to the Department of Labor at Washington any disputes with the management which is under agreement to abide by decisions made there.

BOGGS & BUHL

february sale furniture

—the obviously outstanding sale of the community for very definite and sensible reasons—fashion reasons—and price reasons

THERE has been a "knowing" sense of Fashion expressed in every piece of furniture in the collection—not merely picked because in itself it was good looking—but because it was in good taste: that is, not only good looking but definitely appropriate for its own particular mission. Furniture of this type radiates character—the smallest ensemble of which (probably only a chair and table) will immediately lend a very definite influence to an entire room—perhaps, of the 18th or early 19th centuries—or perhaps, accenting a room with a very modern touch—at any rate, the Fashion theme is as carefully, accurately, and obviously studied and expressed in Boggs & Buhl Furniture as in Apparel and everything else in the institution.

And—as to Price—a moment of study, and it's perfectly plain that the public should expect greater price advantages from this store (in its "expenseless" location) than anywhere else—and from results they are evidently finding this the case.

HURLER FEARS BUC MORE THAN RUTH

DURING a discussion of baseball matters in general following the banquet held by the Pittsburgh sports writers in honor of John H. Gruber at the William Penn Hotel Thursday night, President E. S. Barnard, of the American League, and Honus Wagner, Pirate immortal, drifted around to the ill-fated suggestion of John A. Heydler that the diamond sports be turned into a game for 10-men clubs through the employment of pinch-hitters to bat for the pitchers.

E. S. Barnard.

Like nearly all other baseball men, both Barnard and Wagner have from the start been unable to see the advisability of the proposed change, and in their chat here Thursday night they agreed that it might be harmful rather than helpful to the game.

"It is not true that the American League ridiculed the idea," said President Barnard. "On the contrary it was given the respectful consideration due to any suggestion coming from a baseball man of Mr. Heydler's experience and high standing. It was just that our league could not see wherein the sport would be benefited by such a radical change.

"AS HAS been shown in the many discussions of the proposal, there are a number of reasons why such a departure from established baseball customs appears inadvisable to some of us. But it isn't only the proposed new regulation itself that doesn't appeal.

"There are so many ramifications, so many further angles and undesirable situations and conditions to which it might lead, that the better plan would appear to be to let well enough alone. Apart from the effect it would have upon the playing end of the game, there is another item that must be considered in connection with the suggested change.

"THAT is each club would have to carry two more players than at present. In the major leagues now, no club is permitted to carry more than 25 players between June 15 and August 31. If the proposed change were made, however, each club would have to take on both a right-hand and a left-hand pinch hitter to bat for the pitchers.

"The supply of first-class players isn't great enough to permit this, and, besides, present conditions do not warrant the additional expense from a business standpoint on some of the clubs."

WAGNER went below the surface of things to show a reason why he thinks it would not be advisable to adopt the suggestion of President Heydler. "Pitchers like their basehits even more than do the regular players," Honus said. "They like to bat and would resent being denied the privilege of doing so. Here is a pitcher who is a pretty good hitter forced to sit on the bench while another man goes up to bat for him. Suppose the pinch-hitter strikes out or pops up a puny fly. The pitcher is apt to remark, "where do they get that stuff sending that guy up to bat for me? I could have done better than that myself.

Honus Wagner.

"IN CONTINUING to resent the shift, particularly if it happens to cause the loss of his game, the pitcher may make some sarcastic remark to the pinch-hitter who failed. The latter, in turn, might be expected to show resentment, and there you would have the starting point of the most harmful condition that could exist on a ball club. In other words, such a rule might breed dissension.

"Besides, being allowed to bat has another effect on a pitcher. Remember Sam Leever, of the old Pirates? Well, Sam loved a baseball hit above everything else, and if he happened to make a hit in his first time at bit it put so much pep in him that he almost invariably won his game. The same goes for Burleigh Grimes. If Burleigh makes a hit the first time up he is almost unbeatable that day. There are many things that ought to be considered before they take a pitcher's batting rights away from him."

COMES a booster for Herb Drury, Louis Maioli writes from Renton, Pa.: "I have seen quite a few hockey games in Pittsburgh and think it is the fastest sport going. I have seen the Cook brothers, of the Rangers; Morenz and Joliat, of Les Canadiens; Stewart of Montreal; Conacher, Boucher, Clancy, Nighbor and all the other stars.

"But in my opinion, the most spectacular player, the most daring, the trickiest, and the one that gives you your money's worth is Herb Drury, of the Pirates. He is not much of a goal-getter, but he has everything else. The only bad point about hockey is the referee's whistle. It blows too often."

Jess Petty.

JESS PETTY'S signing of a contract when he visited Forbes Field on Thursday afternoon for a talk with President Barney Dreyfuss, of the Pittsburgh baseball club, was a mere formality. He was only repeating something that he had done before. For, as announced in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph at the time, the new Pirate southpaw signed his 1929 contract in New York last week after giving up his fight to recover some money which he had alleged to be due him from the Brooklyn club. But major league contracts have been changed this year in one detail of their phraseology. The one originally sent to Petty was of the old form, as the new variety had not yet been printed. Jess signed the first one, assuring the local club of his services, and all that he did on Thursday was to conform to the red-tape regulations and pen his signature again on a pact of the new type.

PITCHER STEVE SWETONIC, in whose purchase from Indianapolis in the American Association Pittsburgh outbid four or five other major league clubs, is all set to leave with the Pirate advance guard Monday night for the Paso Robles training grounds.

Steve appears to be in great shape for his attempt to approach in the big show the great record he made in the minors. He has taken on nine pounds, is heavier and stronger than ever before in his life, and in a physical sense says he could not desire better conditions under which to make his major league debut.

DID you ever hear of a single player's making all of the points scored by his team in a basketball game, when that score was

PANTHERS TAME LIONS IN GOOD GAME, 49-38

By JESS CARVER

If Dutch Hermann has his Penn State basketball team as "right" for Carnegie Tech tonight as he had it for Pitt last night—look out Carnegie!

The Nittany Lions, a far more vicious and well-trained band of invaders than has represented Penn State in this city for some time, will conclude their annual two-day stay here by clashing with the Skibos on the Tartan court tonight. Pitt defeated the men of Deutchland Uber Alles last night, 49-to-38, in as exciting a game as has been played in the Stadium Pavilion this season. Pitt's whirlwind attack in the second half was too much for the Lions.

Tonight's State-Tech contest will be the second of the year between these teams. The Panthers walloped John Bowie's boys at State College, January 12. They hope to repeat tonight and Tech hopes for revenge. Both cannot be satisfied.

STATE GOES WELL

Last night's contest was a humdinger. The Lions took plenty of shots and sank as many, Dutch didn't set up defense for Carnegie but sent his cagers out there to score points. Instead of the Panthers' if possible, during the first half the Lion attack was energetic and flashy. Steve Hamas sank three goals, including flipping Hyatt a neat rebound, and Mazess both dumped in a pair of pretty goals from the sides and under the net. Stahley and Bowers, a substitute for Capt. Eddie Reilly, scored one each.

Eddie Baker led the Pitt attack in the first half, tossing in four baskets. Hyatt threw two and four out of five pass-ins. (Four out of five, not an advertisement.) Zeluff slipped under the hoop for two counters.

It was only by virtue of some fine shots by Hyatt and Baker in the last three minutes of play during the first half that Pitt was able to wipe out State's seven-points lead and secure a one-pointer of its own.

In true Panther fashion the local boys went to work after the intermission and soon had piled up a lead. Lee Cohen and W. R. Montgomery, who came close to stealing the limelight for the night, led the attack. Lee with his fine basket getting and Montgomery with his floor work. He played a bang-up game throughout and will be very difficult to keep out of the lineup from

BAKER SINKS SEVEN

Eddie Baker added three field goals in the period, while Lee was getting five and Hyatt a pair to enlarge the Pitt total. Aside from three neat side court shots by Mazess and two from well out in front by Stahley, State's attack faded away. Pitt never held a lead greater than 15 points and for the most part, the Lions kept it whittled down to 11. The lineup:

DUKES TAKE JACKETS

While the Panthers were turning back the State threat, Duquesne checked any ambitious dealings that Frank Wolfe's Waynesburg Yellow Jackets had on Lady Victory by beating the invaders, 54-12, in a Conference battle on the Bluff.

The locals, just returned from a hard Eastern trip, played a steady, snappy passing game, with each of the regulars contributing his share of points. Brud Stephens, with eight to his credit, led the lineup.

South Side lightweight, who has been matched with Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion of the world, in a 10-round bout at Saginaw, Mich., next Thursday night. The title will not be at stake, as the men will box over the lightweight limit of 135 pounds.

TOM CRAWLEY TO BATTLE MANDELL

Tommy Crawley (not Crowley), of the South Side, is to fight a world champion in the ring.

The erstwhile local featherweight kingpin has been matched to battle Sammy Mandell, lightweight ruler, in a 10-round bout at Saginaw, Mich., next Thursday night. The title will not be at stake, as the pair will fight at catchweights over the class poundage.

Meeting men of reputation in the ring is no novelty for Crawley, who numbers among his opponents Benny Bass, former featherweight champion; Harry Blitman, Andre Routis, present featherweight champion; Jack Duffy, of Toledo; Al Corbett, Benny Gershe, Red Chapman, Phil Goldstein, Pete Zivic, Eddie Anderson and the hard-hitting Ray Miller, of Chicago.

Crawley is training for the battle in the Pittsburgh Lyceum gym daily with Jack McCarthy and Johnny Brown, local mittmen. He will leave Tuesday night for the scene of battle.

DEMARCO-CEDER AGAIN

Cuddy DeMarco and Rudy Ceder have been rematched for the main bout in the Moose Temple next Friday night. The boxer and knockout puncher met at Motor Square Garden last Christmas afternoon, with Cuddy winning the decision after being floored. His experience and superior boxing skill carried him through.

The McKeesport club has a "natural" for its main bout next Thursday night in the meeting of Willie Davies, of Portland, and Howard Mayberry, of Donora, at 126 pounds.

Buck McTiernan, of Swissvale, and Mickey Solmen, of New Castle, will appear in the semi-final.

Joey LaGrey, former Johnstown welterweight, boxes Tony Vaccarelli, of New York, in the 10-round windup at the Olympic Club in New York tonight.

LOCAL SPECIAL TO BOUT

Jim Routley, former local boxing promoter, is getting up a party of local fans to go to the Jack Sharkey-Young Stribling bout at Miami Beach, Fla. He already has filled up one car with reservations. The train leaves next Saturday afternoon.

WHITE TRADED TO NEW YORK AMERICANS

GAMES TONIGHT.

Pirates vs. Ottawa Senators at Duquesne Garden (8:30).

New York Americans at Canadiens.

Montreal at Toronto.

By CARL W. SHATTO.

One of the six home games remaining on the Pirates' schedule will be erased from the ice slate at Duquesne Garden this evening when the Ottawa Senators come here for their final appearance of the season. The game will bring together two evenly matched clubs, for the local skaters are only one point ahead of the invaders in the league standing, and in two previous meetings this season they battled each other to a standstill.

Jerry Lowrey, sturdy left winger obtained early this week from Toronto, will have the company of Jess Spring, defense man, and Forward Eddie Bouchard, formerly of the New York Americans, in tonight's fray. Spring and Bouchard became Pirates last evening when Tex White and considerable cash was sent to the New York club in Leonard's second effort of the week to strengthen the Bucs for a driving finish.

NEWCOMERS VETS

Both Spring and Bouchard are experienced performers, but the fact that the latter, like Lowrey, is a left winger, complicates things for Manager Cleghorn in the matter of selecting a lineup. White, who came here in 1923 as an amateur and who has been very popular with local fans ever since, is a right winger, and either Bert McCaffrey or Johnny McKinnon will be moved up from defense to fill the vacancy in the spare front line which Tex's departure has occasioned. Pilot Odie has not reached a decision as to which defenseman shall be transformed into a wing, but it is thought likely that McCaffrey will get the call and that McKinnon will pair up with Roy Smith at defense. Bouchard will share duties with Lowrey at left wing on the spare line and Spring will be used with Holway as a defense spare.

Spring and Bouchard reported to Manager Cleghorn here today, and White will play with the Americans in Montreal tonight.

Tonight's game will be the final act of the biggest hockey program ever offered local fans in a single week. The Bucs, however, appear to thrive on an all-work-and-no-play dish, for their exhibition on Thursday night, when they conquered the Boston Bruins, 2-0, was their best of the long campaign. The decisive triumph over the rugged Hub sextet has served to improve the Bucs' morale, and they are primed to give the Senator defenders 60 minutes of real exercise.

LAST APPEARANCE HERE

In addition to marking the Senators' last appearance of the season here, tonight's game may mark the last appearance of an Ottawa team in this city. Negotiations now are under way to transfer the Senators' franchise to Syracuse, and Ottawa will be without National League hockey next season. Frank Nighbor, poke check king of the ice world, is to retire from the game at the conclusion of the present campaign, it is reported, so tonight's game probably will afford the last opportunity to see the Senators' star center in action here. A knee injury kept Nighbor out of the last Ottwa-Pittsburgh fray, but he now is fully recovered.

Nighbor and King Clancy, one of the fastest big men in the ice sport, are almost a team in themselves, and with Art Smith, Finnigan and Kilrea assisting they are certain to make things interesting for the Bucs and their supporters. The probable lineup:

Senators.		Pirates.
Connell	G	Miller
Clancy	R. D.	McKinnon
A. Smith	L. D.	R. Smith
Nighbor		Frederickson
Finnigan	R. W.	Darragh
Kilrea	L. W.	Milks

Senator spares—Boucher, Toubey, Grosvenor, Codin, Elliott and Shields; Pirate spares—Dyer, Bouchard, Lowrey, McCaffrey, McArthy, Spring and Holway.

DUNN DEFEATS RODGERS IN FAST BOUT

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

Johnny Dunn, of New Kensington, making his first appearance as a main-bouter in Pittsburgh, in the Moose Temple last night, had too much boxing class for little Jackie Rodgers, Negro flash of the North Side, and carried off the decision by winning eight of the 10 rounds, the fourth being even and the ninth, in which Dunn loafed to save up for a fast finish, going to Rodgers.

As is usually the case, Rodgers looked good in defeat. Splendid little showman that he is, he kept trying all the time, forcing the pace most of the way, but Dunn proved too clever a boxer and too good a sharpshooter for him as he drove home volleys of cleanly-patterned blows to the head and body.

There were no knockdowns, but both had their woozy moments in several slugging rallies that thrilled the fans. In the third round, Dunn halted Rodgers in his tracks with a right to the jaw, the best punch of the fight up to this point, and in the sixth, they traded punches in a prolonged rally which saw both tire and become dazed. This was the best fighting round of the battle. Rodgers again was in trouble in the seventh, eighth and final rounds. The battle was a pip for action.

Dunn scaled 119½ pounds, one pound more than Rodgers, at 3 p. m.

EASY FOR M'TIERNAN

Buck McTiernan, of Hazelwood, former local amateur welterweight champion, making his first appearance as a professional fighter in Pittsburgh, looked like the proverbial million dollars in the short time he was in the ring with Freddie Shaffer, of McKeesport, in the scheduled six-round semi-final, which was ordered halted by Boxing Commissioner Harry J. Boyle with Shaffer down for the third time and rolling along the edge of the stage after two minutes and 57 seconds of the opening round. Shaffer, who substituted on 24 hours' notice for Red Ryan, of Washington, Pa., proved no match for the classy McTiernan, who shapes up as a rare prospect from the standpoints of boxing skill, coolness, timing and power of his punches and perfectly balanced fighting form. He ought to clean up the talent in his class in this section. He scaled 153 pounds against 151½ for his opponent of last night.

Patsy Young, of Beechview, doing a comeback, received a stiff split decision in the second bout, in which Andy Sahara, of Braddock, clearly outpunched him through six painful rounds. Patsy has lost all of his former speed and is trying to get by on his knowledge of the tricks of the game. Twice Sahara doubled him up with left swings to the body and with a little more aggressiveness at opportune moments he might have won decisively. As it was Judge Frank Ferris and Referee Joe Keslly voted for Young, with Judge Frank Brown dissenting.

Here's One Good Way to Book A Game

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Princeton experienced an innovation in athletic challenges as the Army blimp, J-4, flying low, dropped a note bearing an invitation for the Tiger freshman basketball team to meet the West Point plebes.

The note, addressed to the freshman basketball manager and signed by A. J. Megan, athletic officer, was dropped in a small parachute, which landed on the roof of the Chemistry Building after the maneuvers of the blimp had attracted the attention of most of the student body.

TECH MERMEN TOP W. & J.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 16.—Wash-Jeff inaugurated its first swimming season in the history of the college here last night at the new gym pool. Carnegie Tech swimmers handed the newcomers a 41-19 defeat. W. & J. followers were satisfied with the showing which their aquatic representatives made in the first attempt, however, and are enthused over the new sport.

It was the first win of the season for the Carnegie team, which has already lost to the Pitt and P. A. A. outfits by rather decisive margins. The summary:

All four will be represented in the tourney, the latter two Y's sending unknown aggregations which may spring a surprise.

By a coincidence East Liberty will meet Hill Top in the first game today at 5:30 p. m. Allegheny and Downtown, in the drawing, secured the second match game at 6:30. There will be sufficient rest for the winning teams before the main game at 9 p. m.

GAME TODAY.

Exhibition.

Pittsburgh vs. Germania Sport Club (Leslie Parks).

By TOM BIRKS.

Only one soccer game is carded for local soccer fans today, and that of the exhibition variety. This tilt will find the Pittsburgh Soccer Club getting a little workout in preparation for the national amateur cup tie next Saturday with the Corinthians, by opposing the German Sport Club.

The principal of the affair will be Otto Zetel, popular center half of the German Sport Club, who suffered a fractured leg in a game with Duquesne some months ago. Since Zetel has a family and has not worked since the Sport Club is boosting this game to try to reimburse Zetel for his loss of his pay check.

The game will be called at 2 o'clock and Leslie Park will be the venue of the game.

This afternoon it is quite possible Harry Faithfull, national amateur committeeman, will hold a session to find out why Union Athletic and Signet is protesting the decision of the referee in the recent soccer game with Heidelberg, scheduled tomorrow.

Things Do Happen That Way, Don't They? —By Tad

WANER BOYS ARE SOUGHT BY GIANTS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

The Waner brothers' Pirate salary dispute took a rather spectacular turn today when it was reported that the New York Giants had offered $225,000 to the Pirate owners for possession of the two little stars.

The report concerning John McGraw's offer has special significance in that McGraw and the fans of the metropolis are "wild" over the Oklahoma phenoms. It may be that the New York management has made no formal offer for the stars, yet there is a strong undercurrent to the effect that this move was taken.

STILL UNSIGNED

Both Paul and Lloyd are still unsigned, or were as late as yesterday. If they fail to swing into line within the next week they will be formally recorded as "holdouts" and will be barred from the spring training camp of the Bucco.

Nobody on the outside appears to know what salaries were given the youngsters last season, and the present demands of the stars are guarded carefully, it would seem.

Widely divergent amounts were accredited to Paul and Lloyd last year. One report had Paul getting a sum far beyond $16,000, while another said he was not getting any more than "ten grand." The highest estimate put on Lloyd's salary last year was $7,500.

ALMOST CERTAIN TO STAY

Brother Paul was voted the most valuable player prize in 1927, but neither he nor Lloyd experienced much trouble in getting into line for 1928, they both signing contracts while in Pittsburgh on their theatrical venture. This season both passed up vaudeville offers in deference to the diamond sport.

That the two will remain in Pittsburgh is almost a foregone conclusion, regardless of any Giant offers. Paul might have been a Giant instead of a Pirate, but, according to the accepted tale, one of McGraw's scouts, after looking over the wee slugger in San Francisco, decided he was too rich for the heavy price demanded by the Seal owners.

TOMOSKY IS WINNER

Nat Litin, of the Hill, 115½ pounds, rallied gamely after getting off to a bad start against Georgie Tomosky, of Wilmerding same weight, in the six-round opener, and toward the finish was winging Georgie lustily with rights to the chin, but Tomosky received and merited the decision.

A near capacity crowd witnessed the bouts. Ray Eberle, of Aliquippa, the announcer, who silences the roar of the crowd with a whistle, was welcomed back on the job after having been off the bill at the preceding show.

Mrs. Rogers Loses; Billie Hicks Cops

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 16.—Mrs. R. B. Rogers, of Pittsburgh, lost her final round match in the third sixteen of the Miami women's championship golf tournament over the Miami Country Club course yesterday. She was defeated by Mrs. J. H. Jefferson, of Utica, N. Y., by 2 and 1.

Miss Helen (Billie) Hicks, Long Island school girl, won her first Florida title by defeating Mrs. John Arends, of Chicago, in the 18-hole final for the Miami crown, by 7 and 5. Miss Hicks was 6 up at the end of the first nine.

high as 27 points? Well, such a record is claimed for Lou Zara, star forward of the Rider College five.

When Zara played for Old Forge High School in the coal regions two years ago, his team defeated Scranton Tech by a score of 27 to 25, and Zara shot every one of Old Forge's 27 points. Tie that one.

ANOTHER boost for the hitting ability of Earl Sheely, Pittsburgh's new first baseman, is contained in some remarks made by George Uhle, former Cleveland pitcher, now with Detroit. Uhle says that during his American League career he has found three players who bothered him more at bat than the great Babe Ruth. He named Sheely as one of the three, saying that he always feared Earl more than the mighty Bambino. The two others he mentions are Bob Fothergill, of the Tigers, against whom he no longer will be required to pitch, and Rib Falk, of the White Sox. Ruth told Harry Salsinger that Uhle is the only right-hand pitcher in the American League who can throw him fast balls and get away with it. Salsinger recalls that in 1926, Uhle struck Ruth out 11 times with a total of 21 men on the bases. On three occasions Gehrig fanned*

Heeney to Fight Maloney in Hub On March 1

BOSTON, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—The signing of Tom Heeney, of New Zealand, and Jimmy Maloney, Boston heavyweight, for a 10-round bout here on March 1, has been announced by Eddie Mack, Boston Garden promoter.

Maloney, who was knocked out in a few punches by the Hard Rock back in 1927, has shown much improvement since he started his comeback campaign eight months ago. He has been fighting often, recently outpointing Johnny Risko, of Cleveland, and Con O'Kelly, the Irish heavyweight.

ORIGINAL MORRY FIVE TO MEET ROSIES HERE

By JULIUS LEVIN.

Receiving numerous requests from followers of professional basketball in all sections of Western Pennsylvania, Morry Goldman, former sponsor of the Pittsburgh Morrys, one-time champions of the Greater Pittsburgh District, has agreed to reorganize the members of the original Morry Big Five for a game with the Cleveland Rosenblum-Celtics at the South Side Market House early in March.

The Morrys in the hey-day of their career were without doubt one of the greatest professional quintets operating in the eastern part of the country and many fans still contend they are capable of defeating the majority of the clubs in the present American League. The record of the Morrys included victories over several members of this fast circuit.

OLD FAVORITES

Those who will take part in the Morry-Cleveland battle will be Ken Loeffler, Geneva College coach; Bill Campbell, Homestead High School coach; Chick Davies, Duquesne University coach; Moon Klinzing, star forward of the Goldensons; Yans Wallace, Knickerbocker coach; George Ramsay, star center of the Duquesne Lafayettes, and Whitey Little.

The Rosenblums captured the first half championship of the American League, and with three former Celtic stars in their lineup compare favorably with the greatest floor machines operating this season. In their first appearance here this season they defeated the Goldensons before a capacity crowd at the Market House. Their game with the Morrys likewise should attract a crowed house as they seldom fail to give the fans a real treat.

DRIBBLES

The game scheduled between the Miele-Franchinas and Duquesne Light at Columbus Temple next Monday night has been postponed until a later date. The Duquesne Light-Reliance game carded for Saturday at the Market House has been postponed until the following Saturday.

The Conleys meet the Lawrys and the Conroys oppose the Jenkins five in the two Homestead District league games carded tonight at Homestead Elks Temple.

Only one game is scheduled tonight in the Greater Pittsburgh Institutional League, Community House playing at Heinz House. The reserve teams meet in the preliminary.

The North Side Community House A. A. U. champions in a third round A. A. U. tournament game.

I. L. Moguls Card 168-Game Schedule

The same teams will meet in the openings in the northern half of the circuit, May 1.

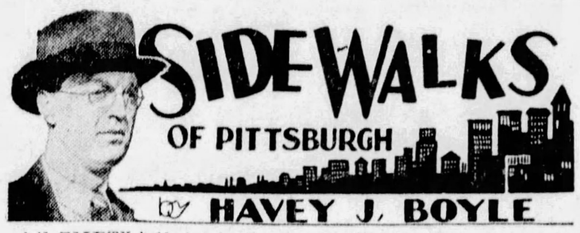
NORTH SIDE, SOUTH HILLS And EAST END NEWS

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1929



AN EMPTY half-pint bottle was standing on the radiator of a wash room in the Federal Building. "Unusual?" asked our scout of a tipstaff. "Yes," he said, "there are usually five or six of them here every day."

* * *

Considerable care by the gentlemen in charge was taken to see that 75-year-old John Gruber would not overtax himself on the night of the dinner tendered him by the local sport writers. He was the coolest man in the house and he made the best talk of the evening.

* * *

RED CARLSON was a fine football player at Pitt and now he is coaching a colorful basketball team at the local school. He says he likes basketball better than football. He agreed, however, that quite a few boys play basketball who should not be engaged in such strenuous sport. Dr. Carlson deems the floor game, as we experts call it, close to the fastest sport there is. Imbued with basketball, the doctor has written a book about it. It is going over pretty well, he reports, which is unusual. The history of nearly every book dealing with sports is one that tells of low sales. For this reason: People deeply interested in sports do not read many books and people who read a great deal are not dyed-in-the-wool sport fans. Even such colorful characters as Sullivan, Wagner, Rickard and McGraw, once put between book covers, failed to draw big audiences.

Dr. Carlson, by the way, tells me of a man who read in a magazine the advice of a writer who said that Pittsburgh was a great place to settle in. The man at that time was a resident of Detroit. He took the writer's hunch, came here, settled in Braddock, and, now set up in an ice cream business, he is making from $25,000 to $30,000 a year.

ACTORS who do what is called in the profession "ad libbing," that is to carry on without any set lines, always are a puzzle to theatrical managers who want the acts kept clean for the family trade. The poor manager never knows when the fellow "ad libbing" may pull a fast one to make the cheeks of the customers turn red. One such performer was given the gate here in Pittsburgh this week.

I used to sit in a box with Gene Connelly on a Monday afternoon of a vaudeville show (the opening performance) and Mr.

Connelly made notes and suggestions throughout the afternoon which later were sent to the performers.

Some of the actors would complain that this line or the other line stricken out would ruin their act, but Mr. Connelly stood for ruination in such cases.

The difficulty with the actors is not that they are sinful, but rather that they sometimes loss their sense of what offends and what does not offend.

Al Mamaux, a Pittsburgh boy who turned to baseball and is now on the stage as a singer, is getting along nicely. He is not as free on the stage as he is around a table with friends where he can spin in entertaining fashion his career as a big league pitcher.

BEER RUNNERS FLEE FEDERAL AGENTS

Dry agents surprised a beer gang in operation yesterday, seized a car load of high-test brew in a boxcar in the School street yards of the B. R. & P. Railroad, and then moved to the South Side and raided eight saloons.

Three beer runners escaped when the agents trooped into the railroad yard, but a fourth suspect, William J. Gordon, of 525 Farnsworth street, was captured. On his truck, agents say, they found six barrels of beer, and in the box car 42 barrels and 53 half-barrels of the high-test brew. The raiders also seized another truck and an automobile abandoned by the three escaped beer runners.

The saloons raided on the South Side and the persons arrested, were: 1016 Carson street, Staley Lease, 35; 1809 Jane street, Stanley Rozodiewicz, 59; 90 South Twelfth street, Anthony Fox, 22, and J. Wallace, 39; 423 East Carson street, Sigismund Zabowski, 23, and Pearl Zabowski, 23; 1419 West Carson street, Edward Harter, 33, and Richard Williams, 34; 3429 Carson street, Mrs. Anna Busko, 36, and Mike Busko, 54; 28 South Twenty-seventh street, Vincent Muchlado, 55; 12 South Twelfth street, Stephen Thomas, 33.

In each of the saloons raided, liquor was seized. All those arrested posted $1,000 bond for a hearing.

The agents also reported seizing a 200-gallon still and moonshine in the home of Mike Thomas, 52, of Ingram. Thomas was arrested.

MISSING AVALON MAN MAY BE IN CANADA

The Missing Persons Bureau has received word from Toronto, Can., that a man answering the description of Walter E. Taylor, 48, missing Avalon plumbing contractor, who mysteriously disappeared January 27, had been seen in that city.

F. J. Mitchell, of Chapleau, Ont., wrote to Michael Feeney, head of the missing persons bureau, that he had heard a description of Taylor broadcast by radio and that it tallied with that of a man he had twice seen in the brokerage office of Watt & Watt, No. 6 Jordan street, Toronto.

According to Feeney, Taylor's wife had informed him that she and her husband had visited in Toronto and other Canadian cities and at her request her husband's description was broadcast by a Toronto newspaper. Feeney will send a photograph of the missing man to Mitchell.

Taylor, according to Avalon police, leaped or fell from the North Avalon bridge last November, but escaped serious injury. His wife and child reside at 301 Cleveland avenue, Avalon.

Left Her Husband, Is Willing to Go Back

Claiming she had left her husband only after she had discovered he was paying attention to other women, Mrs. Martha A. Brewer, 2518 Sarah street, declared a willingness to return to him and strenuously opposed his suit for divorce when the case was heard before Judge James H. Gray in Common Pleas court.

BRADDOCK ADDS NEW NAME TO ARTIST SONS

To the names of Caton and De Rubbo, two of Braddock's sons who, in spite of the environment of the mill town, surmounted seemingly impassable barriers to artistry and fame, is today added another name, also that of a Braddock youth who defied conditions and made of himself an artist—Angelo Di Vincenzo.

Di Vincenzo was brought to public attention at the testimonial banquet given for Fonce Kellams, Braddock's sea hero, when he was introduced as the artist who painted the portrait of the local member of the heroic crew of the liner America.

For 10 years Di Vincenzo sought the secret of mixing colors and mastering the technique of the portrait painter. Ten years of struggle during which he labored in steel mills, washed dishes and slept in school rooms and park benches.

STUDIED AT TECH

Hard labor furnished him with funds that enabled him to attend the night school of fine arts at Carnegie Tech for two years.

From Carnegie Tech he went to New York. But things were different there—he had to place his name on a waiting list, and waiting was expensive.

Eventually he did study at the Grand Central Art School and the Art Students League there, but before he was enrolled as a student he hit upon the idea of offering himself as a model. And was accepted!

POSED, LISTENED

For months he posed, drinking in the criticisms of students and teachers, eking out a meager existence. A story he tells of this period explains how he existed on 40 cents a week—for one week.

While in New York Di Vincenzo did work for the Schuberts, Belasco, Earl Carroll and others. Now, his studies complete, he is back home.

He says he will open a studio here where he can live and work in the light of such enthusiasm as was shown over his painting of Kellams

Will Rogers Says

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.

Somebody just left Yale eight million as an endowment to study humans, including senior classmen. They want to figure out what kind of a heart beats under a raccoon coat. Yale wants to know why Notre Dame can throw a forward pass further than they can a green apple.

It's to study "group conduct" and human behavior. Chicago is the place for that. All this stuff would have been a kick to Abe Lincoln, wouldn't it?

A college president's work nowadays consists of thinking up new things for the students to play with that looks like studying. A kindergarten teacher ain't in it with schemes in trying to amuse.

Yours, WILL.

Red Head to Win—Concluding Prize Mystery Story

Cash Awards to Be Given For Best Solutions; Read Reno Monday

By EVELYN JOHNSON AND GRETTA PALMER.

A RUMINATIVE dusk was falling over the smoking room of the Simla Country Club. The three men before the fire moved closer to the blaze and lowered their voices to a confidential tone.

The great cup race had been run that afternoon, and both Lieut. Allenby and Smithson, the American Consul, were deep in melancholy calculations as to the fate which had taken the victory from "Filly Mignon" and given it to the lieutenant colonel's "Red Head."

"All the odds favored the Filly," said Smithson, apparently addressing a scotch and soda of suspiciously brunet coloring. "She showed herself a better horse on the workouts, Harry, and she never fell down on an important race before. When I woke up this morning and saw the rain, I thought it was really too sure a bet to be quite sportsmanlike, but I wasn't deterred from putting every cent I could get on her nose."

"I KNOW," said the less loquacious Allenby, "I heard she was a mud-lark from all the grooms. If she only hadn't blown up in the last half. Could it have been that the jockey tired her too quickly?"

"Rot," said the American. "I never saw a bad horse better ridden."

The two relapsed into silence. The room was apparently deserted except for these two and their companion, Maj. Grant, who had placed a sentimental bet on "Red Head" in honor of his small daughter, and had won. His regret at having risked so cautious an amount was almost as intense as that of his companions, but tact forbade that he should parade his comparative luck. The major was beginning to find the technical discussion of handicaps and past performances a very dull aftermath to the rush and uncertainty of the race itself. The major's gambling thrills were usually limited to the bridge table, in which limited sphere he was a most notable loser.

"WONDER what this will mean to Hewlitt. It ought to be a relief to him. His luck at bridge has been execrable."

"Bad cards?" asked Allenby.

"Not so much as bad partners. He's drawn that rattle-brained young Jeremy the last two times, and you know his bidding—"

"Lieut. Col. Hewlitt," said Smithson firmly, "is the most ill-advised gambler of my acquaintance. It's a good thing he has a fair-sized income besides his pay. But even then it can't be enough."

"Hardly," laughed Allenby. "Since his charming younger brother has appeared on our primitive colonial scene and demanded all of the appurtenances of a general, short of the epaulets, poor Hewlitt must be very hard up. Why does he stand for the boy's imposing on him that way? It's an outrage, Young Ethan's a clever devil—a little too clever to be trusted."

AT this moment the door opened letting a burst of laughter into the quiet, darkening room. The president of the club, a man outside of the military profession, but popular with the most Kiplingesque of the officers, came in. He closed the door behind him and came over to the little circle.

"Hello, Wainwright," said Allenby. "Have a drink? I heard you were betting on 'Red Head.' Congratulations."

"What's Hewlitt doing?" asked Smithson.

"The noise you heard when I opened the door can be all directly or indirectly attributed to Hewlitt. Most of it directly. He is now toasting all the monarchs of the Empire in champagne to celebrate and was only up to Charles the Second when I left."

"HE told me today that he was on his way to the bookmaker to place all of his and Ethan's money on 'Red Head.' Don't blame him for backing his own horse so strongly. But God what a fluke he won on." It was Maj. Grant speaking.

"Come here, Grant," said the president slowly. "I want to talk to you."

He drew him away from the fireplace and close to the window recess. "As a governor of the club you ought to know. The stable boy tells me that when the race was over it was found that 'Filly Mignon' had a sponge in her nose. Someone had fixed the race."

"Good Lord," breathed Grant. "Was anyone betting heavily on 'Red Head' besides—"

"No," interpolated Wainwright. "No one."

THEY looked at each other in silence and left the room. In a moment Allenby sought the comparative joviality of the bar, leaving Smithson alone. After a minute he was startled to see a figure rise from the depth of a large chair near the window recess and walk quickly to the door without glancing in his direction. It was Ethan Hewlitt. In a half an hour the noise from the bar was quieted, and the steward, looking in to see if all was well, told him that the crowd had gone home, Ethan had had to carry his brother to the car, he said, and drive to the lieutenant colonel's bungalow. Smithson, not having to be up at an ungentlemanly hour, sat on in the silent clubhouse.

A little over an hour later he was roused by the sound of a motor on the gravel road. A bell rang insistently through the empty rooms, and Smithson in alarm, ran to the front door. He met Ethan Hewlitt, very pale and shaken.

"IS the doctor here? My brother's cut his throat, and I don't know if there's time to save him."

"Good heavens!" said Smithson and ran upstairs to the room where the physician slept. The three hurried back to the car and drove off in the direction of the lieutenant colonel's home. On the short drive Ethan told what had happened. After taking his brother home very drunk, he said, he had left him in the living room and gone to the kitchen to get some hot milk as a bedtime remedy. While there he heard a gasp and came back to find John Hewlitt crumpled over his desk, his throat cut from ear to ear and his open razor still in his hand.

"But what was the motive?" asked Smithson in anxious bewilderment. "He had just won the race—"

"THAT is the part I dreaded telling you," said Ethan, after a pause. "Before him there was lying a signed confession that will explain."

The doctor's examination proved futile. The lieutenant colonel was quite dead. The razor when removed from the hand of the dead man was found to have his fingerprints alone.

The confession was given to an expert and declared to be genuine. In John's check book, in his pocket, was found a stub, dated the day of his death and made out to Ethan, for a very large sum, which was Ethan's share of the joint bet on "Red Head," which he had collected from the bookmaker that evening.

The text of the confession, which had been found folded backwards with the type face up, was this:

"BEING hard pressed for money to pay my debts of honor, I had raised high hopes that 'Red Head' would win the cup race. After this week's work-outs I realized that 'Filly Mignon' would easily outrun her. I, therefore, did a most dishonorable thing, regret for which is driving me to this act. I placed a sponge in the nose of 'Filly Mignon' on my visit to the stables this morning, so that she should be unable to win the race.

"I wish to apologize to my regiment, and I trust that my battalion will not suffer from the disgrace of its commander.

JOHN HEWLITT."

The confession had been typed by the lieutenant-colonel's typewriter on an ordinary piece of stationery, which was creased once from side to side at about the middle of the page.

What happened after the lieutenant-colonel and Ethan reached the bungalow?

Solution of Yesterday's 'A Note on the Century'

WILLIE knew that when Ethel boarded the train she would go to the section specified by her ticket and find there the dozing German-American from across the aisle. His watch-chain with its pendulous Elk tooth would prove irresistible to her trained fingers and he might be sure that it would be unostentatiously removed. Willie therefore scribbled a note to Ethel, pulled his neighbor's watch from its pocket, twisted his note into the chain and returned it. Ethel, of course, received the message, and went on with a serene certainty that Willie was safe. To pass the time away, she followed the lady in the beige dress into the washroom on the chance that there might be something in it. When she saw the ring lying unchaperoned on the stand and the lady's back turned, she employed her favorite device. She slipped the ring into a piece of hollow soap and lathered it against a second piece until the two parts appeared as one. The police would, of course, return her soap and tooth-brush to her after their search for the ring.

Merely Margy, An Awfully Sweet Girl

Story by Lloyd Mayer By John Held, Jr.

"REALly, my dear, I THOUGHT I'd go MAD and BITE myself at this point because what with BASil having suddenly conceived this strange idea that his MAD infatuAtion for me was HOPEless, and deLIB'rately aVOIDing me in the most CHILDishly OBvious WAY, my dear, I was as NERVous as a BEE with the MEASLES, no less, because I was SIMply SUNK about the situation, do you know what I mean? ACtually, my dear, it was sort of PREYing on my MIND and I was getting POSitively neuROTic because one night after DINner when I was taking the AIR on deck with DADdy I simply BROKE down and TOLD him I'd expected this YACHT ride to be TERribly roMANtic and all, but SO far I hadn't had the LEAST bit of exCITEment and didn't he s'pose we could LAND somewheres and go some place to DANCE—can you BEAR it, my dear? Well, ANYways, it was TOO excruciating because DADdy responded he should think the LAST place I would crave to GO that night was to a NIGHT club, which I said was the FACT—it was the LAST place I'd want to GO, which was a kind of DREAR little JOKE, my dear, but kind of fitted IN with my MOOD and of course DADdy, the odd soul, didn't GET it at ALL, my dear—can you COPE with it? But, ANYways, my dear, JUST as I was thinking SEriously about taking the VEIL or something things pepped UP and I'm conSUMED with a passion to confide the THRILLing incidences that SUDdenly began to transPIRE bewilderingly—I mean I ACtually AM!"

NANCY DEANE By Roy L. Foley

CHAPTER XXXVI.

AT THE very door Nancy was reminded of the man of whom she was thinking—there was the evening paper folded on the threshold. Howard had told the superintendent to see that she had it every evening. She picked it up without opening it and laid it on the pretty little table in her sitting room.

Then, still troubled, she went about getting dinner; but somehow she didn't feel like eating, and after she had washed the few dishes, she settled down in the shaded light to ponder over again the disturbing things Maybelle had said to her.

And to think that she was in the next room. Somehow that very thought made Nancy feel guilty. It was as though she weren't sure of Wescott's intentions herself and feared Maybelle could look through the wall. And yet if Howard were really in love with her, if he had really meant it when he had referred so casually to marriage, wasn't everything as it should be?

His wasn't John Blair's way of asking her to marry him—John wanted to help her—to share her life, to make things easy for her and for her beloved Mud and Darry;—ah how would Howard Wescott act toward those two old people who had cared for her and adored her?

She did not pursue that thought—she could not—she was conscious of trembling at the mere prospect of Howard Wescott's coming—she tried to reassure herself but Maybelle's words shouted in her ears—"her guy."

It must have been several hours before the bell rang. It was Howard's ring, three sharp quick touches to the bell; a sort of special signal he always gave.

Nancy jumped up and ran to the door. He walked in just as though he had a perfect right there. How handsome he was, how fresh and clean and aristocratic. At that moment she thought he had never looked handsomer.

"How about a little spin?" he asked, his eyes devouring her, "just a little one—a dance or two and then we'll come back?"

"Why Howard," she stammered—"why—"

He didn't wait for an answer but marched to the closet and came back holding out the raccoon coat: "Here we are, little Golden Head," he said cheerily, "now you see how wise you were in keeping this coat."

And before she knew it, her arms were in the satin sleeves and she was enveloped in its furry depths. Like a prisoner—she wanted to protest. Wanted to learn from Wescott if he really—if he really meant what he had said at "The Rendezvous" in the firelight with his mother's picture looking down at them.—She looked up at his dark eyes and all her courage vanished, she was like a bird fascinated—caught in a net; her heart was beating madly in revolt and yet she had to give in.

Almost before she knew it she was in the roadster by Howard's side speeding in the cold air toward The Chalet; she was not cold, not physically cold, the raccoon coat laughed at the biting wind and yet she shivered.

Wescott's hand sought hers for a second: "What's the matter, cold?"

"No, no—oh, no. I'm warm as toast."

"That's the girl."

Nancy sank back; she couldn't ask him now—speeding at 40 an hour—but later—yes she would ask him later—she must know—for her own sake she must know—for Mud's sake and Darry's and—oh, why did the thought of John Blair always bob up?

The Chalet was not too crowded and the table Wescott selected was in a far corner. Mysteriously, without any order from him apparently, two long stemmed glasses were there; one before her and another before him; "I've got a little treat for you tonight," he whispered, "brought it along with me—and he poured out of a bottle concealed in a napkin a bubbling white liquid that sparkled and glinted.

"Here's to happiness," he said, raising his glass and motioning to her to do the same; her fingers touched his just as the brims clicked and a warm thrill ran through her.—"This'll take the chill out of your bones," laughed Wescott, "wonderful old vintage—made for a Queen," and he bowed to Nancy gallantly.

Almost mechanically she sipped the champagne—was conscious of a glow dancing in her veins—conscious that little by little, that she'd been all wrong about Howard Wescott—hadn't he just called her a Queen?

Wasn't he treating her with every mark of respect? As for Maybelle and her horrible insinuations—they came from a mind that thought evil—As they proceeded to eat leisurely of the dishes brought by an attentive waiter, Wescott refilled their glasses, unostentatiously, meticulously. "Won't hurt you," he assured her, "do you good—you know I wouldn't offer it to you otherwise."

Oh, he must love her! he was so solicitous; gradually her fears of the early evening vanished in a rosy cloud. Her eyes sparkled with the sparkle of the wine as though its thousands of little bubbles had blossomed within her blood into smiles. Her cheeks glowed; Wescott looked at her almost chokingly; he was saying to himself: "Lord, she's a beauty—lucky, I'll say I am."

They danced and she felt his nearness; it was a delicious sensation to have his arms about her; to sway with him to the rhythm of the music; she danced as she had never danced before, like a sprite on the toes of inspiration. It was wonderful, intoxicating, obliterating.

The clock was striking 11 when they headed for the city; and this time Nancy was warm—warm all over—in her body, in her brain—gone were disturbing thoughts—she was happy—happier than she had ever been before. She was with him, the man she loved—and he loved her—she knew he did—he must—he couldn't look at her like that if he didn't—and when they reached the little flat he would tell her—there in the quiet he would repeat earnestly this time what he had merely hinted at before—repeat his love and ask her to marry him.

They reached the apartment building just before midnight; they were the only passengers in the small elevator; they entered the tiny flat unseen.

Very tenderly Wescott removed the raccoon coat; his hands were trembling. His eyes had such a strange look in them that Nancy trembled too.

"Come here," he said leading her to the couch near the shaded lamp, "let's sit down and talk things over."

But he didn't talk—he drew her to him and almost crushed her; he kissed her lips, her throat, her hair, "Nancy—little Golden Head—tell me—you love me—don't you?" he asked brokenly.

She was trying to push him away, trying to and yet not wanting to—what was the use of trying to fight him? Her heart was pounding so she was afraid it would choke her—so she feared he'd hear it.

"Please," she was quavering, "please Howard—please don't." She was saying this, lying to herself meaning "yes, yes, I do love you—I do—"

"There, there," he became suddenly gentle, "let's be comfy now you trust me don't you—I want to hear you say that."

"Why of course I do—" her throat was dry as she said it "why I wouldn't be here with you if I didn't—would I?" she ended in a lame little laugh.

"Of course you wouldn't—now listen Golden Head—you remember the other night—at—" he was going to say "at Dad's house—" but he caught himself and said instead—" by the fire—how we talked about a little trip—; Now why couldn't we go on a little trip—for a couple of months—we could stop in New York and—"

"The Little Church Around the Corner," whispered Nancy, "that's what you said, wasn't it?"

But somehow Wescott didn't answer this—he went on rapidly, alluringly, in a soft persuasive voice, "and then we could catch a boat for the Mediterranean—Italy—Egypt—think of that—why it'd be the most wonderful adventurn in the world—wait till you stand in the dark watching the Southern Cross—seeing the lights in the sea—"

"Oh, Howard," she gasped, caught with the dream of it, "it'd be too wonderful—too marvellous—like a vision—"

She couldn't believe that such happiness was to be hers—she kept wondering if she were really she—what had she done to deserve all this—

"And we'd belong to each other," he kissed her drooping eyes, "we'd enjoy it all together—away from the city—the noise—the dirt and little Golden Head—little Golden Head—"

She was in his arms now—her brain swimming—her senses reeling—there was no more resistance in her; his lips were on hers and her arms were about his neck—wanting to be there.

He loved her—that was all that mattered—she was conscious, dully conscious that he was lifting her—carrying her—somewhere—somewhere.

The door to the tiny bedroom was open—his head was bent close to hers as he walked.

Solution, Prize Winners of Last Week's "Red, White and Green"

IT was the intention of Andrews to murder Marsden in order to gain possession of the emerald without the unpleasant formality of paying for it. With this end in view he had chosen a special cube of ice in the electric refrigerator and had waited until the stage of freezing when the sides were solid but the top had not yet frozen over. He dropped the lethal dose of cyanide of potassium into the center of the cube and also put in a straw to indicate which was the poisoned piece of ice. The cube later froze solid about the poison.

After the observant Wilkins had seen the emerald pass from the hands of the great jewel thief to Andrews, the genial host left the room for the serving pantry, asking Marsden to pour himself a drink. On his return he carefully dropped the marked cube into the highball of his morose guest and spent the next few nervous moments in organizing a roulette game.

After the collapse of Marsden, Andrews rushed to the sideboard ostensibly to get some brandy for the dying man. While he shielded himself by turning his back to the guests, he managed to slip the emerald out of his watch pocket and into the bottle of Creme de Menthe, knowing that the color of the liquor would conceal the presence of the green stone.

RICH RUM RUNNER'S WIFE CALLS PROHIBITION A TRAGEDY

MORE LEADERS PRAISE TEMPERANCE CONTEST

Absorbingly interesting human documents from contestants and observers of the Hearst $25,000 temperance prize contest in all part of North America continue to flood the headquarters of the competition at No. 220 South street, New York.

The mental picture of what prohibition as a whole has meant to one sector of society is illustrated strikingly by a letter from Mrs. Kathryn M. Wagner, of 6136 Greenwood avenue, Chicago, who encloses the written testimony of a confidante in Detroit, and says:

"Reading of your temperance prize contest offer and being keenly interested in the question, I enclose a letter received from a French lady, for whom I did a slight favor in the course of the world war. She is a cultivated girl and married a young and ambitious French-Canadi officer who lost an arm in battle.

"After the war he went to Detroit as a salesman and later sent for his wife—but I shall let her tell her own story. I think the $25,000 prize offer one of the best ways to bring about a correction of the evils of prohibition, and it does not require any great prophetic vision to foresee certain calamity for the United States unless an end is made of the Besmirching of national honor by hypocritical enforcement officers. I wish there were many more facts concerning this pressing question."

Farce and Tragedy

Such excerpts from the Detroit letter to Mrs. Wagner as may be published follow:

"My husband went into business here with an American with whom he fought in France, and who had lost an eye and had also been gased. Other business enterprises having failed, they then took to selling Canadian liquor. The business grew largely and thrived. My husband was at first afraid of the enterprise, but when I saw rich, intelligent Americans spending so much money for liquor, I, A French woman, said to him that if these Americans wanted their wines, beers and liquors, they would in any event get them from somewhere and somebody.

"The two men paid plenty for protection and they were never bothered. When the coast was clear they were told of it. Your American prohibition laws may be all right for bootleggers and prohibition enforcement officers, but your liberty-loving citizens declare it to be an absolute farce—and no funny French farce, either. It is a tragedy.

"In this region many a farmer that I know voted dry—for reasons of his own—but he had a still on his farm. With barrels of wine in his cellar, and barrels of potent hard cider for neighborhood customers, of course this kind of farmer pays your so-called enforcement men, too.

"The customs records of Canada indicate that $25,000,000 worth of whisky was cleared officially from the dominion last year. I cannot see how the prohibition laws are ever going to be enforced. It is against both nature and the Scriptures, for so long as the land grows corn and fruit there will be the prohibited beverages.

Riches in Rum

"I have studied Americans through unblinded eyes and I do not believe that the real manly men of the country will ever endure an overdose of prohibition or long remain under such sumptuary legislation. That is why they make sport of and deliberately disobey the law. If I were this fine New President, Mr. Hoover, whom his countrymen seem to admire so deeply, I should certainly do something about this situation.

"The conduct of some of these enforcement officers is nothing short of legalized crime and both their corruption and the law they help flaunt are demoralizing youth. It is making a detestable institution of graft, repulsive to all decent people. If you have read of the recent revelations of widespread corruption in Detroit, I can tell you that it is even worse than it appeared.

"My husband's partner and friend died last October as the result of being gassed in the war. He asked us to quit. We have done so. We are rich now, and are going back to France. Our partner, before dying, wrapped himself in the American flag. His last words were: 'I am dying for you, old flag, willingly, but there are many cowards trying to stifle the freedom of conscience for which you stand.'

"We buried him in his flag and one floats over his grave. The Eighteenth Amendment was kind to him in life, but in death he despised it. If legally we acted wrongly by engaging in that business, kind friend, forgive us, but remember all the conditions. Good-bye. Merie."

Oscar W. Stoehr

Oscar W. Stoehr, president of the Indianapolis Federation of Civic Community Clubs:

"I think that Mr. Hearst's offer is a great thing for the nation. Any movement to shed light upon the enforcement of the prohibition law or to reveal that it has been enforced or cannot be enforced is an excellent thing."

Dr. H. T. Moore

Dr H. T. Moore, president of Lake Forest College, Lake Forest, Ill.:

"I approve most heartily of Mr. Hearst's plan to advance ideas of temperance. I am not in favor of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, but we all realize that temperance is the ultimate issue. The prohibition amendment and temperance should and could work together.

"That men of Mr. Hearst's caliber are interested in temperance is encouraging. His $25,000 prize offer should be helpful and educational. Time will show whether prohibition means an increase in temperance or whether countries like England and Scotland where liquor is openly sold are more temperate than the United States."

Rabbi Ephraim Frisch

Rabbi Ephraim Frisch, of Temple Beth-el, San Antonio, Texas:

"Mr. Hearst's project may help to throw some light on the present question and situation. It has always been my opinion that the question of temperance is one of social hygiene and self-control.

"Above all, the question of temperance should be kept free from political consideration."

E. H. Kifer

E. H. Kifer, president of the San Antonio, Texas, Chamber of Commerce:

"The prize offer of William Randolph Hearst will necessarily inspire much thought in connection with what is recognized as one of our most important and outstanding economic problems.

"It is my opinion that the majority of the American people will problem when the facts are all find the right answer to any placed before them, and they begin to think. Mr. Hearst's plan should accomplish this purpose.

"He deserves our appreciation for bringing this subject forcefully to the attention of the American people in a way that will inspire real thought and study. It is possible that Mr. Hearst and the prohibitionists are not so far apart in their ultimate hopes and purposes."

7 Rules of $25,000 Temperance Contest

The purpose of the contest is to obtain a practicable plan, as a substitute for prohibition, which will secure better actual temperance conditions, which will be more easily possible of enforcement by state and Federal authorities, which will offer less encouragement to crime and tend less to debauch the public service, and which will not so outrage and violate the fundamental rights and personal liberties of American citizens.

The rules and conditions of the contest are simple and are as follows:

1—Every person is entitled to enter the contest, but no one person may submit more than one plan.

2—The practicable plan proposed as a substitute for prohibition must be set forth in an article containing not more than 1,000 words.

3—This contest will close on April 30, 1929, and no plan which has not been mailed and postmarked on or before that date will be considered.

4—The articles submitted in the contest will be judged by a committee of eminent Americans, the personnel of the committee to be announced at a later date.

5—The full prize of $25,000 will be awarded to the contestant submitting the best plan as a practical temperance substitute for prohibition.

6—If other plans not awarded the first prize shall still be considered worthy of some compensation by the committee, a second prize of $5,000 and other prizes of $1,000 each may be awarded.

7—Articles submitting a plan to be considered in this contest may be sent to the temperance contest committee, care of the editor of any one of the following Hearst newspapers: Albany Times-Union, Atlanta Georgian, Baltimore News, Boston Evening American, Chicago Herald and Examiner, Detroit Times, Los Angeles Examiner, New York American, Omaha Bee-News, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Rochester Journal, San Antonio Light, San Francisco Examiner, Syracuse Journal, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Washington Herald, Wisconsin News (Milwaukee).

Chicago Killings Cited As Sign of 'Dry' Failure

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Richard C. Patterson, Jr., commissioner of correction, New York City, declared yesterday:

"It is an ominous reminder that lawlessness and organized crime that has grown out of the attempt of well meaning people to enforce total abstinence in America are still with us; that the criminals spawned by prohibition are totally contemptuous of the laws made to protect human life.

"No respectable citizen is safe when city streets and buildings are made the battle ground for rival bootleg gangs armed with machine guns.

"It is the time for sober Americans to take stock of the situation and look the facts in the face. They have on their statute books a law which their officials have so far been unable to enforce, however conscientiously they have tried.

"Americans who want to drink find it not only possible but easy to do so in the wildest excess. Then, besides failing to achieve its own end, prohibition, with its wave of crime has threatened to undermine the older and more basic laws that protect human life and property.

"It is a problem that must be solved in the interests of human peace and safety, and it will take calm thinking to solve it. Therefore I welcome Mr. Hearst's $25,000 prize contest, which aims to bring forth a temperance plan that will be sane, honest, and most important of all, capable of enforcement. We need our thought stimulated toward a solution of the present evil, and the Hearst plan should be a great contribution to that end."

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA EULOGIZES MRS. HEARST

BERKELEY, Cal., Feb. 16.—(Universal Service.)—In the spacious confines of the memorial gymnasium erected in honor of her son, students and officials of the University of California yesterday paid loving tribute to the memory of the late Phoebe Apperson Hearst.

In reverence and with full appreciation of her worth and the debt of gratitude owing her by the university, they did homage in word and in song.

The memorial services, held in the east wing of the Hearst Memorial gymnasium, an edifice erected for the women of the university by William Randolph Hearst as a tribute to his mother and her love of California youth, were a part of the annual Founders' Day exercises of the university.

P.-T. A. FOUNDER

They were attended by hundreds who packed the museum. And by the services Mrs. Hearst was extolled not only for her great part in the life of the University of California but as the founder of the Parent-Teacher Association movement in America.

President W. W. Campbell, of the university, presided over the memorial, while Will C. Wood, state superintendent of banks and former state superintendent of public instruction, was among the principal speakers.

Wood paid glowing tribute to the memory of Mrs. Hearst. He said in part:

"Of all Californians, Phoebe Apperson Hearst was perhaps the greatest in bringing home to the people of the state a realization that America is staking its future on the welfare and training of its youth.

"Aside from the fact that the arrangement and many of the buildings housing the University of California are monuments of her vision and beneficence, some of her best work was done in promoting social intercourse among the students of her time."

Lauding the parent-teacher movement founded by Mrs. Hearst, Wood declared this to be one of her greatest achievements.

President Campbell, extolling Mrs. Hearst as the "perfect example of womanhood," declared that "the best part of this beloved woman's philanthropies was not material."

Kentucky Senator Addresses Bond Club

President-elect Herbert Hoover's South American trip was a stroke of diplomatic genius that will mean trade and friendship with Latin America, Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, declared in an address before the Bond Club in Webster Hall last night. He also praised Thomas A. Edison as the greatest benefactor of civilization during the last 50 years. F. J. Lisman, veteran financier, of New York, predicted a consolidation of all the Eastern railroads into four systems within 10 years.

RAILWAYS MEN AID PAVING

Officials of the Pittsburgh Railways Company have tentatively agreed to finance the paving of the street car area on Irvine street, between Glenwood and Hazelwood avenues, at an estimated cost of $47,000, in addition to the general fund of $200,000 contributed to the city each year for that purpose.

The city is establishing Irvine street along the hillside and the thoroughfare will afford the railways company an opportunity to abandon tracks on Second avenue.

City officials have been stressing the advantages accruing to the railways company by reason of Irvine street, particularly the avoidance of crossing over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and the consequent reduction in accidents.

The proposal was revived again yesterday at a conference of Director Edward G. Lang, of the Department of Public Works; city engineers, officials of the railway company and members of the Traction Conference Board. After lengthy discussion, Lang was requested to prepare legislation giving the company a franchise on Irvine street and providing for payment by the company of the paving of the street car area.

Coolidge Gay as Schoolboy; Lindy Linked With Morgan.

By B. C. FORBES

CALVIN COOLIDGE has become, compared with his former seriousness, almost as lighthearted as a schoolboy.

He has developed a fondness for play, a new trait. He has become distinctly more talkative and now more often gives relief to his formerly-suppressed sense of humor. The Calvin Coolidge who leaves the White House is quite a different man from the Calvin Coolidge who entered it five and a half years ago. His severity of manner led one elderly visitor to the White House to crack a joke which Mrs. Coolidge tremendously relished.

All through dinner the President had said hardly a word and never approached anything resembling a smile. His inconspicuous continued after the dinner party broke up into several small groups.

"When does formality cease and informality begin in the White House?" the elderly visitor, noted for his wit and his daring, asked Mrs. Coolidge.

She smiled graciously. "In this instance, right now."

"I have reached the conclusion, Mrs. Coolidge, that you have committed a Burbank marriage."

"A what?"

"A Burbank marriage."

"I'm afraid I don't know what you mean."

"I'm convinced yours was the union of a lemon with a peach."

"Good! Good!" exclaimed the lady of the White House delightedly. "I'll keep that and give it to the President when he needs it."

Mr. Coolidge has changed so much that he probably no longer "needs it."

COL. LINDBERGH'S two latest achievements have linked him indirectly with the house of Morgan.

His bride's father, Ambassador Morrow, made, his mark as a partner of J. P. Morgan & Co. and should he not be placed in public office after he finishes his complicated task in Mexico, the probability is that he will return to the firm. This international banking house never had a more democratic partner. His democracy he inculcated in his family, as reflected by the fact that, notwithstanding their wealth, the oldest daughter became a teacher in their home town, Englewood, N. J.

Col. Lindbergh's chief in the Pan American Airways, President Juan Terry Trippe, who is only 29, recently married the daughter of the late Edward R. Stettinius, who won a Morgan partnership by his brilliant handling of war purchases here for the Allies. Young Trippe, who secured Lindbergh as the company's technical adviser, received the first air mail contract ever awarded by the United States government to a private party, when he was operating the Colonial Air Transport Company, which he organized. Trippe, a graduate of Yale, early took to flying and became a well-known pilot. He flew the Byrd North Pole plane before Byrd did. He accompanied Lindbergh from Miami to Havana on the historic flight which he arranged and which Lindbergh has just concluded.

Henry Ford declares that flying is for the young and leaves that end of his business largely to his only son, Edsel, who is 35. Trippe, as already stated, is only 29, while Lindbergh is 27.

THE Union Pacific is double-tracking its line between Salt Lake City and Los Angeles. President Carl Gray declares that Southern California's population will double within a few years. Incidentally, the Union Pacific has planned a line from Las Vegas to link up with Boulder Dam.

The Los Angeles trade territory is becoming a notable cotton-growing area. The last crop brought in more than $50,000,000 in new money states J. Rahney Day, president of the Citizens' National Bank of Los Angeles, a former Texan, who has been the mainspring of this cotton cultivation development. In addition to the veritable rush of gold poured into the state by oil, the "invisible income" from the vast amounts of securities locally owned is becoming a very important factor. At a recent investment bankers' association dinner some 700 executives and salesmen of the local investment banking fraternity were present. Los Angeles bank deposits have risen from $85,000,000 to $1,486,000,000 in six years and bank clearings are running 30 per cent over last year.

California now has 26 automobiles registered to every mile of paved road, one for every three people. Firestone and Goodrich both built large tire plants there last year and now the Samson Company is building a 40-acre factory. The city ranks second only to Akron as a tire producer. Last month Willys-Overland opened an assembly plant and is already employing 800 men.

Mr. Day states that the assured prospect of Boulder Dam's early construction has fired afresh the imagination of that whole section of the country and is having a tonic effect upon large-scale enterprise.

INEXPERIENCED swimmers in the speculative sea should not venture beyond their depth at this time.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Turn Lower

Narrow Declines Here

SELLING STORM TURNS STOCKS LOWER

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—The stock market ran into another storm of selling at the opening today and prices of active issues dropped 1 to 5 points on initial sales. One block of 24,000 shares of Anaconda Copper changed hands at 128, off 3¾. Radio (new stock) and Chrysler opened with blocks of 10,000 shares at 70 and 99, respectively, off 1 point each. Motor Products dropped 5 points, General Electric 4, Packard Motors 3¾ and Electric Auto Lite, Stewart-Warner, Westinghouse Electric and Atchison yielded 2 points or more.

Early selling undoubtedly was inspired by the statement of the Federal Advisory Counsel approving the recent warning of the Federal Reserve Board that the volume of speculative credit must be curtailed, and suggesting, in addition, that member banks be asked to co-operate in making the policy effective. Several blocks of 5,000 to nearly 25,000 shares changed hands in the first few minutes of trading, all at declining prices.

Radio (old stock) broke 15 points, Wright Aeronautical 7¾, Allied Chemical 6, Union Carbide 5¾ and American Power and Light, National Cash Register, International Combustion, American and Foreign Power and Curtiss Aeroplane fell back 3 to 5 points.

Early declines of 2 points or more were recorded by a wide variety of issues including U. S. Steel common, New York Central, Allis Chalmers, American Can, International Harvester, Chile Copper, Canadian Pacific, Montgomery-Ward, Commonwealth Power, Kennecott Greene Cananea, Columbia Graphophone and Canadian Pacific.

Foreign exchanges opened easier, with sterling cables quoted slightly lower at $4.85 9-32.

THE PRODUCE MARKET

The demand for most all lines of fruit and vegetables was good today at the Pittsburgh wholesale produce district. The quotations remained unchanged.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Prices in the bond market today held fairly steady, but were irregular. Rails again were in demand and lost ground, while utilities and the stocks of international Telephone & Telegraph and Consolidated Gas Co. of New York yesterday advanced on increased earnings reports. Erie Oil, Simms Petroleum and Pan-American Petroleum & Transportation B were active. Massachusetts Public Utilities shares were in demand. New York Central common and preferred were heavy on rumors involving it in merger plans.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15. (AP.)—Transactions at the New York Stock Exchange today, as shown by the official sales list, aggregated $15,000,000 par value. Sales of bonds and shares totaled $25,000,000 of dollars.

MENDELSOHN'S WEDDING TROT

"Bugs Baer"

TWO of our biggest heroes are about to be standardized.

They made an after-dinner speaker out of Capt. Fried of the Vestris.

Lindy is going to be married.

Fried was the hero who rescued everybody. But who will rescure Fried?

After the captain's sixth after-dinner speech he will sadly admit that the theme song of life is still a razzberry.

And no more will Lindy visit Paris alone.

There are millions of broken-hearted girls who loved the Eagle.

Now he has been taken out of circulation.

No man is a hero to his valet.

Nor to his wife.

The only difference is that you can fire the valet.

Look at Gene Tunney's case.

Has the world champion whipped anybody since he has been married?

They still cheer Tunney in Europe.

But his wife stands up and takes the bow.

As an established married man we admit that Lindy is still showing courage.

The heroes steering airplanes are outnumbered by the heroes piloting baby carriages.

There is one detail about that marriage ceremony which may be of service to Lindy.

He should insist on retaining his maiden name.

It is quite a shock to be famous all your life, then get married, and have to be introduced all over again.

Lindy's record flights are over. You can't get anywhere with eight hat-boxes, 11 trunks and a lawn mower.

The Colonel is back in the ranks.

Protect the Photoplay With Uniform Rulings

Recently the Pennsylvania state courts decided that a "talkie" is a film and hence comes under the provisions of the state censorship act covering photoplays. The producers of the vocal film thought it should have the same immunity from censorship that a stage play has.

It is fortunate for the film industry that it has not the same freedom, since that liberty of expression is one of the things that has dragged the stage down to its present low estate. The movie is going ahead constantly and the stage is going the other way. The screen is clean and the stage is filthy. The meritorious productions behind the footlights do not reflect the tendency there. It is the obscenity of theme and language in the modern stage production that points the way the stage is going. Were it subject to censorship, as the screen is, it were better for the theater.

Hence, reputable producers of screen entertainment should welcome and uphold censorship. It prevents the filthy-minded from getting an opportunity to flaunt the sewer as entertainment, a proceeding that would lower the photoplay to the same level as the stage, from which patrons have been driven in disgust to the wholesome form of amusement in the cinema theater, where the whole family may go and find no cause for blushing.

Censorship that differs in various states, however, has made some producers impatient of all censorship. It should be uniform in all states.

The proposal has already been made by the Hearst papers that every one of the states appoint censors, but that these censors operate as a national board, and that this national board of censors establish uniformity of rules and requirements.

Thus the public will be protected and the producers also, since the moving picture people will know exactly what standards the censorship has established, and the standards will be the same in all sections of the country.

There Must Be Substitute For Coal and Iron Police

Because the coal companies employing coal and iron police bear some of the stigma reflected in the acts of those who guard their properties they should, for their own benefit, join in the move to do away with this force.

Coal properties, of course, must have protection the same as other properties, and any change that is made in the existing method of protection, which should be by men directly under the control of and responsible to the state, must have in view adequate means to prevent destruction of property.

In doing away with the Cossackism that prevails under the present plan of endowing privately hired thugs with the authority of the state it is essential that an adequate substitute be provided, either through enlargement of the state police, or through creating a separate force at such times as it would be required. The main thing is that the force be selected by the state and made answerable to it and that it maintain peace impartially instead of being a special agent of terrorism under private direction as the coal and iron police are.

Ambition Is Often Man's Greatest Asset in Life

A boy who might have been a motion picture actor was awarded $45,000 by a Brooklyn jury for injuries that disabled him permanently. What percentage of the amount represented the lad's lost ambition and what part was thrown in for the broken bones would be interesting to learn.

Yet, even though Joseph Kashioff could scarcely have taken Rudolph Valentino's place on the screen, as he hoped to, it is worth noting that the jury considered his ambition in fixing the judgment. Ambition is often man's greatest asset in life and castles of dreams may prove valuable reality in the right mental setting. The loss of hope, the defeat of desire, the annihilation of ambition well may be a greater misfortune than the crippling of the body.

Interesting Curiosities

A Letter by Poe.

Shelley's own copy of "Queen Mab" sold for $68,000, top price for a Shelley volume to date.

Three autographed copies of Pope's "Essay on Man" sold for $29,000, and a manuscript written by Pope sold for $23,000.

Mrs. Browning wrote an opinion of Poe's "The Raven," Poe wrote a letter, quoting Mrs. Browning's opinion, and his letter is sold for $19,500, more than he got for the poem.

If interest in literature was as great as interest in literary curiosities, writers might do better.

Going Up! -:- -:- -:-

By Nelson Harding

Mr. Harding's cartoons are admirable, not only in their execution and in the idea back of each, but especially because they MAKE MEN THINK.

The most important thing in the world is HUMAN THOUGHT next to Divine goodness.

The power of thought, illustrated in this picture, shows how the ape man, trembling in superstitious fear of the lightning's flash, has, by thinking and looking upward, gradually raised himself from degradation to world control.

Once held to the ground by fear and necessity, he now visits the clouds, and the lightning where it lives.

And he makes the power of that lightning his servant on earth.

THAT IS PROGRESS, product of THOUGHT.

Tales That Are Told

Too Strict

HECTOR had become engaged to a school teacher. The wedding was fixed to take place within three months, and Hector's friends, after offering their congratulations, began to send presents along to them.

It caused a big sensation, therefore, when the engagement was broken off a week before the event.

"What on earth happened?" asked all his friends, on learning the news. "You must still love each other. You were so well suited."

Hector shrugged his shoulders.

"Perhaps we were," he said. "But, dash it, I can't be expected to marry a woman who wants me to bring her a written excuse from my mother when I don't happen to turn up for an appointment."

A True Scot

AN Aberdonian on a visit to London noticed outside a house a brass plate which stated that the tenant was a professor of economics who gave lectures and consultations. He went inside and asked for a lecture. The professor agreed, and turned out the lights in the room.

"What's the idea?" asked the visitor.

"Light is not required while I am speaking," said the professor.

Presently the speaker heard a rustling sound, and stopped.

"What are you doing?" he asked.

"I'm takin' off ma coat," came the reply; "there's no need to wear it oot in the dark."

Saved!

THE conjurer made a frantic search through his clothes, turning his pockets inside out and bringing forth, among other things, a rabbit, a potted geranium, a drum, seven eggs, the ace of spades, a bird in a cage, two guinea-pigs and a bowl of goldfish.

"There!" he exclaimed triumphantly to his wife, who had been watching him with grim suspicion, "I told you I was positive I had posted your letters this morning!"

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

THESE here divorce trials sometimes get pretty hot. Well, the husband's lawyer was cross-examining the lady.

"Is it true that you called your husband a liar and a crook and a thief and a loafer at breakfast this morning?"

"Yes."

"And you called him a pig and a brute and a dirty dog?"

"Yes."

"And you called him those names every morning at breakfast?"

"Well, now, I ain't going to say that, no. Sometimes I forgot the pig and sometimes the dog, and sometimes I just plum forgot the whole parcel, and just called him an animal. I ain't got a memory for the whole Natural History, and I guess I can't be blamed for that, can I?"

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

THERE was once a lame slave.

He belonged to Epaphroditus, a follower of Nero, and his name was Epictetus.

Some say he was lame because his master broke his leg as punishment. It was quite permissable for masters to do that to slaves in the first century, A. D. But, though his master may have broken his leg, nothing on earth could break his spirit. Through all cruelty, privation and humiliation Epictetus was "master of his soul," and by brave words have come ringing down through history as a challenge to all that is noblest in human nature.

I was discouraged the other day. Something had happened to me which seemed monstrously unfair and I was very sorry for myself. I made no attempt to fight this difficulty. Instead I fairly grovelled and wallowed in self-pity. And, while I was in the midst of this disgusting exhibition of cowardice, I happened upon certain words which that lame old slave had uttered nearly two thousand years ago.

"Difficulties are the things which show what men are. For the future, in any difficulty, remember that God, like an instructor of athletics, has engaged you with a rough antagonist. For what end? That you may be a conqueror like one in the Olympic games, and it cannot be without toil."

"GOD HAS ENGAGED YOU!"

Tremendous words! They are an accolade that knights any man who will accept them for his own.

"GOD HAS ENGAGED YOU!"

Epictetus didn't know what God was any more than you or I do, but he did believe in a Supreme Power and in the importance of man. He believed that each man, however lowly his estate, really mattered and that life was a serious and splendid adventure if one would have it so.

HE ADMITTED THAT MEN COULD NOT ALWAYS KEEP SHACKLES OFF THEIR LEGS BUT HE WAS SURE THEY COULD KEEP THEM OFF THEIR SOULS.

Epictetus kept the shackles off his own soul by deliberately accepting trouble as a challenge and an opportunity to prove his mettle instead of groveling before it like a helpless slave.

Two thousand years ago a fettered man had faced his tragic lot with that gallant gesture and here was I, free, white and full of wallop, crawling around eating worms because life had become temporarily difficult.

I read the words again—

And then I looked solemnly across the century at that shackled old slave and I said in shame and reverence—

"KID, I HAND IT TO YOU! YOU'VE MADE ME FEEL LIKE THIRTY CENTS!"

CELESTIAL SPHERE

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Your articles are a great help in school work. I am a student in Ardmore School of this village. A short time ago the question came up whether the stars and constellations move about in the celestial sphere. None seemed to be able to give a definite answer. Would you please tell me about this?
"H. A., Villa Park, Illinois."

BY the celestial sphere is meant the sky which surrounds us on all sides like the inside surface of a vast, round dome. The stars and constellations, which are fancied figures that seem to be outlined by the stars, appear like points of light attached to the celestial sphere, as if they were so many electric lamps of various degrees of brightness.

The sky therefore resembles a vast dome-shaped roof in which these lamp-like stars are fixed, and this roof appears to revolve continually around the earth, carrying the stars with it. They keep their positions unchanged with reference to one another, but the revolution of the dome causes them to move, all together, in a direction from east to west. Since they all move in step they cannot be said to "move about" i. e. wander about in the celestial sphere. What they do is only to travel with that sphere. They are called "fixed stars" "to distinguish them from a few other objects which resemble them, but differ from stars by really moving about, more or less. These are the planets, of which our earth, from which we behold the spectacle, is one. There are eight principal planets, of which only five are bright enough to be visible to the naked eye.

The fixed stars, which comprise nearly all the star-like objects that we see in the heavens, and of which several thousand are visible to the naked eye, are extremely distant suns. If we could put our sun as far away as they are it, too, would appear as a mere point of light.

But the planets are, comparatively, very near by, and like the earth they all revolve around the sun. It is in consequence of this revolution that they appear to move irregularly among the stars, which form an unchangeable background.

But now I must remind you that the motion of the celestial sphere, carrying all the stars with it from east to west, is only an apparent revolution, a "relativity effect," arising from the real rotation of the earth from which we look out. The earth's daily rotation carries us around from west to east. In other words, we live on a huge ball which turns on itself in the center of the celestial sphere and makes that sphere, which, in fact, has no such motion, appear to revolve around us from east to west.

Now, this revolution causes the wandering planets, as well as the fixed stars, to seem to go round and round this earth. It also causes the sun to seem to travel around us, rising in the east and setting in the west. The sun really stands still, as far as the earth is concerned, and it is only the rotation of the earth that makes it appear to move.

Bible Passages

Wages of Sin

(Romans 6; 15-23.)

WHAT then? shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid.

Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death or of obedience unto righteousness?

But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you.

Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness.

I speak after the manner of men because of the infirmity of your flesh: for as ye have yielded your members servants to uncleanness and to iniquity unto iniquity; even so now yield your members servants to righteousness unto holiness.

For when ye were the servants of sin, ye were free from righteousness.

What fruit had ye then in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? for the end of these things is death.

But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life.

For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Inspiration

SOMETIMES a zig-zag, dazzling light will flare
Across the shadowed azure of the sky,
Revealing for an instant in its glare
A thousand things the sun does not descry.
The shadow of a twig upon the grass,
The tracery of veins along a leaf
Are stamped on memory as on a glass,
Etched there in lines indelible as brief
And sometimes, too, a strange, undreamed of Power
Around the startled soul a moment plays
And leaves behind a rare and deathless dower
To make it richer through all future days.
A moment only, then it dies away
And whence or how it came, no man can say.

PARIS, Feb. 16.—The Parisian revue has won world-wide fame for its naughtiness, yet save for the occasional scenic surprises, it is little different from the average American burlesque show. Ziegfeld, White and Carroll long ago beat them at their own game.

They excel only in nakedness. In "Tout Paris," at the Casino de Paris, a bevy of beefy ladies, two chewing gum, ambled to the footlights entirely undraped, save for scanty loin cloths. The comedians are the red-nosed sort with baggy pantaloons who punctuate their fun by kissing each other. Whoops!

The chorus consisted of what the program listed as "The Sixteen Smart Boys," roguishly rouged and smirking youths in wasp-waisted pink costumes with mincing steps and singing falsetto. I would like to have a percentage of the hospital rights and offer them before an audience of cow hands in Tulsa, Okla., on pay day.

Perhaps an American might enjoy a Paris revue more if it were not for the pests who nag him in reaching his seat. The Parisian gives the impudent program girl the equivalent of a penny. Less than three francs from an American and he will be followed and insulted down the aisle.

The girl ushers follow the same procedure. No matter what you give them, they will stand by after you are seated with hand extended, demanding more. Mine, not satisfied with a two franc pourbois, waited for at least a moment for more, and not receiving it, sneered "Cochon!" That, my dears, is a pig.

But there is something extremely pleasant in the easy intimacy between a French audience and performers. In the front row sat a perfect type of venerable French Papa with his happy family. He munched from a poke of candy, passing is around at intervals to members of the orchestra. And all partook, you bet.

One of the comedians, strolling through the aisles, stopped, shook hands and chatted with a half dozen acquaintances while the show come to a full stop. And some distinguished lady in a box, evidently a professional, received a bow or was blown a kiss at one time or other from each member of the company.

Nothing so elevates a person here as death. The most humble funeral cortege passing through the street becomes instantly the object of reverential respect. Pedestrians become inert and every man lifts his hat. Motor cars swerve to the curbs and stop. Through the broad open windows of a lingerie shop—(I was there with my wife, smarty)—this morning, I saw a funeral procession pass. In unison, all clerks turned from customers and bowed, while lips moved in brief prayer.

The tiny shops nestling under the broad colonnades of the rue de Rivoli are rich with human interest. I think especially of a learned and aged couple who conduct a glove shop a few steps from rue de Castiglione. Four customers fill it to capacity. The entire stock is in a few boxes behind the counter. Papa, with his snowy white beard, sits at the cash drawer, while mamma waits on trade. Through a slit in a curtained door one may—and I did—peep into their home in the rear. It has that meticulous shine only a French housewife achieves, and is a combination one room parlor, bedroom and kitchen. Both speak French, Russian, German and flawless English. Papa has never been to New York, but discusses it intelligently. He told me about treasures in the Metropolitan Museum and rare volumes in the public library. They go to the opera twice a year and spend a day on a Seine boat trip. Outside of these excursions they rarely leave their shop. There is a solicitude and tenderness in their mutual devotion as they approach the shadows together, that is touching.

* * *

Incidentally, the way most of us pronounce the Seine makes it a Greek word to the French. Their pronunciation is "Senn." Hard and flat—like a night hawk taxi driver's head.

* * *

There is rarely any whimpering out loud over leaving Paris. When the last petty annoyance in getting away is over, you generally make a secret vow this will be your last trip. And I always want to cheer. But don't let that influence you—I once cheered for Clifton Webb. You swear you will never come back. But you do. For, after all, the beauty and charm of Paris far outweigh its irritating this and that.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

HAVEN'T you allowed trivial matters to take too much of your thought? Little, unimportant things in the big scheme of life call your attention.

You worry because you cannot dress better, because you have not certain luxuries enjoyed by most of your friends.

You are giving a lot of time to figuring how to get things which are after all a very small part of life.

Because your thoughts follow this line and direction you have not considered the big matters.

So you have missed not only the big chances, but unfitted yourself to consider bigger problems.

The mind cannot work out puzzling problems without that sort of exercise.

It functions best in the channels it most frequently follows.

Why waste so much time and thought in an effort to solve little questions?

Why should you permit yourself to be harassed or interested in only those things which a shallow brain would be able to handle?

It is one or the other.

Consider things in their relative value and choose the big things of life.
